TO THE Brethren of the Craft
READER.

IT has been the cuſtom of all my worthy brethren, who have honoured the craft with their books of conſtitutions, or pocket-companions for free-maſons, to give us a long and pleaſing hiſtory of maſonry from the creation, to the time of their writing and publiſhing ſuch accounts, viz. from Adam to Noah, from Noah to Nimrod, from Nimrod to Solomon, from Solomon to Cyrus, from Cyrus to Seleucus Nicator, from Seleucus Nicator to Auguſtus Cæſar, from Auguſtus Cæſar to the havock of the Goths, and ſo on until the revival of the Auguſtan ſtyle, &c. &c. &c. Wherein they give us an account of the drawing, ſcheming, planning, deſigning, erecting, and building of temples, towers, cities caſtles, palaces, theatres, pyramids, monuments, bridges, walls, pillars, courts, halls, fortifications, and labyrinths, with the famous light-houſe of Pharos and Coloſſus at Rhodes, and many other wonderful works performed by the ARCHITECTS, to the great ſatisfaction of the readers and edification of free-maſons *.

* Quere, Whether ſuch hiſtories are of any uſe in the ſecret myſteries of the craft.

Having call'd to mind the old proverb, Better out of the world than out of faſhion, I was fully determined to publiſh a hiſtory of maſonry, whereby I did expect to give the world an uncommon ſatisfaction: and, in order to enable myſelf to execute this great deſign, I purchaſed all or moſt of the hiſtories, conſtitutions, pocket-companions, and other pieces (on that ſubject) now extant in the Engliſh tongue.

My next ſtep was to furniſh myſelf with a ſufficient quantity of pens, ink, and paper: this being done, I immediately fancied myſelf an HISTORIAN, and intended to trace maſonry not only to Adam, in his ſylvan lodge in Paradiſe, but to give ſome account of the craft even before the Creation: And (as a Foundation) I placed the following works round about me, ſo as to be convenient to have recourſe to them as occaſion ſhould require, viz. doctor Anderſon and Mr. Spratt directly before me, doctor D'Aſſigny and Mr. Smith on my right-hand, doctor Deſagulieur and Mr. Pennell on my left-hand, and Mr. Scott and Mr. Lyon behind me; a copy of (that often called) the original conſtitutions (ſaid to be in the poſſeſſion of Mr. John Clark, in Paris), and another copy of the ſame magnitude handed about in England, together with the pamphlet printed at Frankfort in Germany, I tied up in the pulic Advertiſer of Friday, October 19, 1753, and threw them under the table *.

NOTE.

* Several pamphlets (on maſonry) have been publiſhed ſince the firſt edition of this book, viz.

Maſonry

Maſonry Diſſected, the Maſter-key to Maſonry, the Three Diſtinct Knocks, Boaz and Jackin, &c. if any perſon or perſons have gained either knowledge or admittance into lodges by virtue of thoſe publications, he or they ought to publiſh it for the good of mankind, as well as for the honour of the ingenious authors.

I call them Ingenious, or rather Geni's, becauſe they pretend to have diſcovered the great Arcanum which the world in general have agreed to be more difficult than to diſcover the longitude at ſea. How far they have ſucceeded (in opening the eyes of the world) is no buſineſs of mine, eſpecially as the pamphlets and the authors of them are all dead, therefore I ſhall remark only three things: The firſt is a groſs falſhood inſerted in the Three Diſtinct Knocks, where the author ſays, that he was born in Pruſſia, that he got ſome knowledge of maſonry by the help of a pamphlet in France, that he was in ſeveral lodges in England, and, for confirmation of the whole, he ſigns the initial letters of his name, &c. whereas it is well known that every part of theſe aſſertions are falſe, he being an Engliſhman by birth, a bricklayer by trade, his name Daniel Tadpole, and never was in France, nor (if you believe free-maſons) within the doors of a lodge in Great Britain. The ſecond thing (which indeed is very remarkable) is the manner of his death, which happened upon Monday night the 23d. of Auguſt 1762.

Mr. Tadpole having ill ſucceſs in trade, made an elopment from bricklaying in order to pay his devotion to the Ladies at Parnaſſus, as the famous Ben Johnſon had formerly done. Our modern artiſt was not ſo fortunate as his great predeceſſor, for meeting with a common ſtrumpet whom he took for one Miſs Terpſichore, he begat a bantling which he ſoon after preſented (in a comic dreſs) to his friends, but the poor little creature was ſo weak in its parts, and had ſo little ſpirits, that a principal actor (called punch) in a puppet ſhow drove it out of the kindom without the honour of ever coming to the field of battle, I mean the ſtage. Loaded with diſappointments Mr. Tadpole thought himſelf melancholly enough to write a tragedy, but, alaſs, he miſcarried in this attempt alſo, and laid the fault on one Madam Melpomene, who refuſed to give him any aſſiſtance. One day while he was bemoaning his misfortunes, a conſtant companion of his, a Jew named Balthazar Amraphel, paid him a viſit, to whom he related his ill ſucceſs, Vell, vell, Maſtar Tadpole (ſays Amraphel) ſheer up your haawrth, you ſhall do very vell bom by; ay, you ſhall vraite ſo vell aſs any body, af you'll take my advize; vraite ſum tin vhat your ſalfs nor non body alſe underſtand, vraite about free-maſontry, I vill tell you ſom Ebru vords for put in it dat vill make your countrymans ſtare. Dat iſs de vay moy boy dat aur peoples humbug your peoples. In ſhort Mr. Tadpole took the lucky hint and by the help of Balthazar Amraphel wrote that pamphlet call'd the Three Diſtinct Knocks, and ſold

ſold it to Mr. Sergeant, bookſeller, near Temple-Bar in London.

The diminutive ſum which Mr. Tadpole received for the pamphlet, was not ſufficient to maintain an author a week, therefore he took particular care to wrong the Jew of his part; ſuch behaviour exaſperated Amraphel ſo much that he diſcovered the whole affair to me and a few more, which otherwiſe muſt have remained a ſecret to this day. The Jew (who was a very cunning fellow) after his paſſion was ſomething abated, began to conſider how to be revenged on his companion, therefore, the better to accompliſh his deſign, he thought it moſt adviſable to hide his reſentment, and pretend to be in perfect friendſhip with him.

Mr. Tadpole, who never ſuſpected any treachery, put more confidence in the Jew than he had hitherto done. The conſequence of this renewal of friendſhip was, that Mr. Tadpole, by a proper inſtrument in writing, gave up all his effects into the hands of the Jew, with a deſign to defraud his creditors by a ſtatute of bankruptcy, or by the benefit of the act of inſolvency, commonly known by the name of the White Waſhers Act.

The Jew immediately took poſſeſſion, and diſpoſed of every thing to the beſt advantage. Some time afterwards Mr. Tadpole demanded a ſum of his money from the Jew, who not only refuſed him, but at the ſame time threatened to have him hanged according to the laws of the Realm. The wretched Daniel Tadpole fell down upon his knees and cried O! Amraphel, Amraphel, what have I done unto thee, that thou ſmiteſt me thus, when one ſevere blow of thine, is tenfold more violent than my three diſtinct knocks. The hard hearted Jew, inſtead of liſtening with an ear of compaſſion to the lamentable importunities of the now diſtreſſed Daniel Tadpole, ſent for officers to apprehend him, which Tadpole perceiving, he immediately made his eſcape out of the houſe, and got into White-chapel fields on the eaſt ſide of London. It was then between 11 and 12 o'clock on Monday night the 23d day of Auguſt 1762, when Mr. Tadpole, to avoid being taken by his purſuers (as it is thought) hid himſelf in a ſand or clay pit in the ſaid fields, where (we ſuppoſe) he ſlept until ſuch time as a nightman (vulgarly call'd a Tom T—dman) came from the city, as is cuſtomary, and turning the tail of his great cart over the pit where the hapleſs delinquent lay, he inſtantly diſcharged no leſs then four tons of human ordure down upon him, which ſmothered him to death.

The third remarkable thing is the untimely end of the learned gentleman that wrote the pamphlet intitled Boaz and Jackin, I forbear to mention his name becauſe his widow is now living, and has had afflictions and reflections enough already. All that I ſhall ſay is, that in a fit of Jealouſy he cut his throat on Thurſday the 8th. day of September 1763.

Having tried my pen, and wrote a line not unlike the beginning of the chapter in the Alcoran*, I began to flouriſh away in a moſt admirable manner, and in a few days wrote the firſt volume of the hiſtory of maſonry, wherein was a full account of the tranſactions of the firſt grand lodge, particularly the excluding of the unruly members, as related by Mr. Milton †.

By this time I imagined myſelf ſuperior to Joſephus, Stackhouſe, or any other hiſtorian whom the reader ſhall pleaſe to think on. And as I intended to give the world a hiſtory of maſonry for ſeveral years before the creation, I made no manner of doubt but my work ſhould live (at leaſt) two thouſand years after the general conflagration.

Perhaps ſome of my readers (I mean thoſe that are beſt acquainted with my capacity) will ſay, he has more vanity than wit; and as to learning, it is as great a ſtranger to him, as free-maſonry is to women; yet he has the folly to think himſelf an an hiſtorian, and expects to become a great man, &c.

Whether ſuch an opinion be true, or falſe, it matters nought to me; for the world muſt allow, that (tho' no man has yet found out the perpetual motion) all men ever had, has now, and ever will have, a perpetual notion: And furthermore, we read that the following perſons, ſo much fam'd in hiſtory, were not only poor men, but many of them of a very mean extraction. The wiſe philoſopher Socrates, was the ſon of a poor ſtone-carver; the tragic poet Euripides, was the ſon of poor parents; as was Demoſthenes, the honour of Greek eloquence; Virgil, the famous Latin poet, was the ſon of a poor Mantuan labouring potter; Horace, the incomparable Lyric, was the ſon of a trumpeter in the wars; Tarquinius Priſcus, king of the Romans, was the ſon of a merchant; and Servius Tullius, another king of the Romans, was begotten on a woman-ſlave; Septimius Severus, is ſaid to come of a very baſe degree; Agathocles, king of Sicilly, was a potter's ſon; Ælius Pertinax was a poor artificer, or, as ſome ſay, a ſimple ſeller of wood; the parents of Venadius Baſſus, are ſaid to be very miſerable poor people; and Arſaces, king of the Parthians, was of ſo mean and obſcure parentage that no man's memory could make a report of his father or mother; Ptolomy, king of Egypt, was the ſon of a 'ſquire in Alexander's army; the Emperor Diocleſian, was the ſon of a ſcrivener; the emperor Probus, was ſon of a gardener;

dener ; and the parents of Aurelius, were ſo obſcure that writers have not agreed who they were; Maximinus was the ſon of a ſmith, or as ſome ſay a waggon-wright ; Marcus Julius Licinius, was the ſon of a herdſman ; Bonoſus, was the ſon of a poor ſtipendary ſchoolmaſter ; Mauritus Juſtinus, predeceſſor to Juſtinian, and alſo Galerus, were both ſhepherds ; pope John, the Twenty-ſecond of that name, was the ſon of a ſhoe-maker ; pope Nicholas the fifth, was the ſon of a man that ſold eggs and butter about the ſtreets ; and pope Sixtus the fourth, was a mariner's ſon ; Lamuſius, king of the Lombards, was the ſon of a common ſtrumpet, who (when he was an infant) threw him into a ditch, but was taken out by king Agelmond ; Primiſlaus, king of Bohemia, was the ſon of a country peaſant ; Tamerlane the great, was a herdſman ; Caius Marius, ſeven times conſul of Rome, was born of poor parents in the village of Arpinum ; and Marcus Tullius Cicero, conſul of Rome and pro-conſul in Aſia, was from the poor Tuguriole of Arpinum, the meaneſt parentage that could be ; Ventidius, field-marſhal and conſul of Rome, was the ſon of a muleteer ; and Theophraſtus was the ſon of a botcher, i. e. a mender of garments, &c.

I have heard of many others of later date that have been preferr'd to places or offices of great truſt, and dignified with titles of honour, without having the leaſt claim to courage, wit, learning, or honeſty ; therefore if ſuch occurrences be duly conſidered, I humbly conceive it will not be deem'd as a capital offence, that I ſhould entertain my own perpetual notion, while I do not endeavour to diſinherit any man of his properties.

I doubt I have tired the reader's patience; and if ſo, I humbly beg his pardon for this long digreſſion. But to return, while my mind was wholly taken up with my fancied ſuperiority as an hiſtorian, &c. I inſenſibly fell into a ſlumber, when me-thought four men entered my room; their habits appeared to be of very ancient faſhion, and their language alſo I imagined to be either Hebrew, Arabic, or Chaldean, in which they addreſſed me, and I immediately anſwered them after the pantomime faſhion: After ſome formal ceremonies, I deſired to know their names and from whence they came; to which one of them anſwered me (in Engliſh) we are four brothers, and came from the holy city of Jeruſalem; our names are Shallum, Ahiman, Akhub, and Talmon. Hearing they were ſojourners from Jeruſalem, I aſked them whether they could give any account of SOLOMON's TEMPLE; to which Shallum * (the chief of them) made anſwer and ſaid, the wiſe KING SOLOMON, GRAND-MASTER of Iſrael, appointed us head porters at the Temple, in the thirty-ſecond year of his age, the twelfth of his reign, and about the year of the world 2942: and therefore we can give a full and particular deſcription of that wonderful fabrick, and likewiſe of the ingenious artiſts who perform'd it. I was glad to meet with ſuch brethren, from whom I did expect a great deal of knowledge; which the many ages they had lived in muſt have taught them, if their memories did not fail: upon this conſideration I told them, that I was writing a hiſtory of maſonry, and beg'd their aſſiſtance, &c.

A hiſtory of maſonry! (ſays Ahiman) from the day of the dedication of the holy Temple to this preſent time, I have not ſeen a hiſtory of maſonry, though ſome have pretended (not only) to deſcribe the length breadth, height, weight, colour, ſhape, form, and ſubſtance of every thing within and about the temple; but alſo to tell the ſpiritual * meaning of them, as if they knew the mind of him who gave orders for that building, or ſeen it finiſhed: but I can aſſure you, that ſuch ſurveyors have never ſeen the temple, nay never have been within a thouſand miles of Jeruſalem: Indeed (continued he) there was one Flavius (I think he was a Soldier) took a great deal of notice of the temple, and other matters about it; as did another man, called Jerry: There were two others whoſe names I have forgot, but remember one of them was an excellent dreamer ‡, and the other was very handy in collecting all manner of good writings ‖ after the captivity.

Thoſe were the only men that have wrote moſt and beſt upon that ſubject, and yet all their works together together would not be ſufficient for a preface to the hiſtory of maſonry; but for your further inſtruction, you ſhall hear an eminent brother who can inform you in every particular that is neceſſary to your preſent undertaking. The words were ſcarce ended, when there appeared a grave old gentleman, with a long beard; he was dreſſed in an embroidered veſt, and wore a breaſt plate of gold, ſet with twelve precious Stones, which formed an oblong ſquare: I was informed that the name of the ſtones were Sardine, Emerald, Ligure, Beryl, Topas, Saphire, Agate, Onyx, Carbuncle, Diamond, Amethyſt, and Jaſper: Upon theſe ſtones were engraved the names of the twelve tribes viz. Reuben, Judah, Gad, Zebulun, Simeon, Dan, Aſher, Joſeph, Levi, Naphthali, Iſſacher, and Benjamin.

Upon his entrance, the four ſojourners did him the homage due to a ſuperior; as to me, the luſtre of his breaſt-plate dazzled my ſight, in ſuch a manner that I could ſcarce look at him. But Ahiman giving him to underſtand that the people of this country were weak-ſighted, he immediately covered his breaſt-plate; which not only gave me an opportunity of perceiving him more diſtinct, but alſo of paying him my reſpects in the beſt manner I was capable of; and making a very low bow, I preſented him with the firſt volume of the hiſtory of maſonry, hoped he would do me the honour of peruſing it, and beg'd his advice for my further proceedings: he kindly received it, and read it over, whilſt I impatiently waited to hear his opinion;

nion; which at laſt (to my mortification) amounted to no more than an old Hebrew proverb (which Ahiman tranſlated thus; Thou haſt div'd deep into the water, and haſt brought up a potſherd): nevertheleſs he took me by the hand, and ſaid *; my ſon, if thou wilt thou ſhalt be taught, and if thou wilt apply thy mind thou ſhalt be witty; if thou love to hear thou ſhalt receive (doctrine); and if thou delight in hearing thou ſhalt be wiſe: and although your hiſtory of maſonry is not worth notice, yet you may write many other things of great ſervice to the fraternity.

Certain it is (continued he) that free-maſonry has been from the creation (though not under that name); that it was a divine gift from God; that Cain and the builders of his city were ſtrangers to the ſecret myſtery of maſonry; that there were but four maſons in the world when the deluge happened; that one of the four, even the ſecond ſon of Noah was not maſter of the art; that Nimrod, nor any of his bricklayers, knew any thing of the matter; and that there were but very few maſters of the art (even) at Solomon's temple: whereby it plainly appears, that the whole myſtery was communicated to very few at that time; that at Solomon's temple (and not before) it received the name of free-maſonry, becauſe the maſons at Jeruſalem and Tyre were the greateſt cabaliſts † then in the world; that the myſtery has been, for the moſt part, practiſed amongſt amongſt builders ſince Solomon's time; that there were ſome hundreds mentioned (in hiſtories of maſonry) under the titles of grand-maſters, &c. for no other reaſon than that of giving orders for the building of a houſe, tower, caſtle, or ſome other edifice (or perhaps for ſuffering the maſons to erect ſuch in their territories, &c.) while the memories of as many thouſands of the faithful Crafts are buried in oblivion: From whence he gave me to underſtand, that ſuch hiſtories were of no uſe to the ſociety at preſent; and further added, that the manner of conſtituting lodges, the old and new regulations, &c. were the only and moſt uſeful things (concerning free-maſonry) that could be wrote: to which I beg'd to be informed, whether ſongs were to be introduced: his anſwer was *: if thou be made the maſter, lift not thyſelf up; but be among them as one of the reſt: take diligent care for them, and ſo ſit down.

And when thou haſt done all thy duty, ſit down, that thou mayſt be merry with them; and receive a crown for thy good behaviour.

Speak thou that art the elder, for it becometh thee; but with ſound Judgment: and hinder not muſic. † And at all times let thy garments be white.

While he was ſpeaking theſe laſt words, I was awaked by a young puppy that (got into the Room while I ſlept, and, ſeizing my papers, eat a great part part of them, and) was then (between my legs) ſhaking and tearing the laſt ſheet of what I had wrote.

I have not words to expreſs the ſorrow, grief, trouble, and vexation I was in, upon ſeeing the cataſtrophe of a work which I expected would outlaſt the teeth of time.

Like one diſtracted (as in truth I was) I ran to the owner of the dog, and demanded immediate ſatisfaction: he told me he would hang the cur; but at the ſame time he imagined I ſhould be under more obligation to him for ſo doing, than he was to me for what had happened.

In ſhort, I looked upon it as a bad omen; and my late dream had made ſo great an impreſſion on my mind, that ſuperſtition got the better of me, and cauſed me to deviate from the general cuſtom of my worthy predeceſſors; otherwiſe I would have publiſhed a hiſtory of maſonry: and as this is rather an accidental than a deſigned fault, I hope the reader will look over it with a favourable eye.

In the following ſheets I have inſerted nothing but what are undeniable truths, which will be found (if obſerved) to be of great uſe to the fraternity, and likewiſe to numbers that are not of the ſociety; to the latter, it will ſhew them the folly of ridiculing a ſociety founded upon religion, morality, brotherly love, and good fellowſhip: and to thoſe of a more gentle and better poliſhed nature, nature, in giving them an opportunity of examining whether they are indued with the neceſſary qualifications to be made free-maſons.

How far this may anſwer the deſign, I know not; but I hope that my brethren and others will accept the will for the deed, and take this as the widow's mite was received, which will amply reward my trouble.

A PHILAC-

A PHILACTERIA

For ſuch

GENTLEMEN, as may be inclined to become FREE-MASONS.

GENTLEMEN,

IF the love of knowledge, intereſt, company, or dear curioſity, ſhould take poſſeſſion of any corner of your heads or hearts, and work you up to a deſire of becoming free-maſons; in ſuch caſe, I beg leave to offer my ſervice as your guide to the lodge door: this propoſal, will not (I hope) be diſagreeable to you, conſidering that I am the firſt perſon that ever offered aſſiſtance in this manner. But, before we ſet out, it is neceſſary that you carefully examine whether you are properly equipt for ſuch an undertaking.

To this end, be it known to you gentlemen, that in every warranted lodge they have the following order, viz.

"Any perſon deſirous of being made a free-maſon in the lodge, ſhall be propoſed by a member thereof, that is to ſay, his name, age, deſcription of his perſon, title, or trade and place of reſidence; that ſuch propoſal ſhall be made in lodge hours * at leaſt one lodge-night before the initiation, in order, that the brethren may have ſufficient time and opportunity to make a ſtrict enquiry into the morals, character and circumſtances of the candidate; and the brother that propoſes him ſhall at the ſame time depoſite ſuch a ſum (of the candidate's money) as the majority ſhall think ſufficient (not leſs then one crown) to inſure the lodge that the candidate will attend according to the propoſal. And if the lodge approve his perſon, age, character and circumſtances, and therefore initiate him into the myſtry &c. he ſhall pay whatſoever ſum the brethren ſhall think proper (not leſs than two guineas) and cloath the lodge † if required. But if the lodge think the candidate unworthy, and refuſe to make him, his money ſhall be faithfully returned to him; but, in caſe the lodge approve his perſon and character &c. and he refuſe to be made, then ſhall he forfeit his money for the benefit of diſtreſſed free maſons. And it is hereby ordered and declared, that no perſon is capable of becoming a member of the lodge, but ſuch as are of mature age, upright in body and limbs, free from bondage, has the ſenſes of a man,

* That is from the vernal to the autumnal equinox, between ſeven and ten o'clock in the evening, and from the autumnal to the vernal equinox following, between ſix and nine o'clock, man, and is endowed with an eſtate, office, trade, occupation, or ſome viſible way of acquiring an honeſt and reputable livelihood, as becomes the members of this moſt ancient and honourable fraternity. *

† By cloathing is meant white aprons and gloves, not only for every member in the lodge, but alſo for all their wives and ſweethearts.

By this regulation you ſee that the free maſons will make a ſtrict (though private) enquiry into your character and ability: And therefore I adviſe you to be as circumſpect on your ſide. Perhaps, you may think that it will be impoſſible for you to diſtinguiſh the good from bad, amongſt a people who make it their peculiar ſtudy to keep all things ſecret. Let not ſuch a thought diſcourage you, when I aſſure you, that you have a faithful guide, who has made free maſonry (both antient and modern) his conſtant ſtudy for twenty years paſt, and thinks it a duty incumbent on him, to give you theſe inſtructions.

In the firſt place, when you intend to be made a free maſon, go with your friend to the lodge, and deſire him to ſhew you the warrant or diſpenſation by which the lodge is held; that is to ſay, an inſtrument printed or written upon parchment and ſigned by ſome noble grand maſter, his Deputy and grand wardens, and grand ſecretary, and ſealed with their grand lodge ſeal &c. conſtituting and appointing particular perſons (therein named) as maſter and wardens, with full power to congregate and hold a lodge at ſuch a place, and therein make and admit free maſons, according to the moſt antient and honourable cuſtom of the royal craft, in all ages and nations throughout the known world, with full power and authority to nominate, chuſe and inſtall their ſucceſſors &c. When they produce this authority or warrant, then call for the by-laws, and (having ſeriouſly peruſed them) conſider whether your natural diſpoſition will incline you to be conformable to them. Next call for the roll or liſt of the members, where you may find the names of ſome of your intimate and moſt eſteemed friends, or perhaps the names of ſuch (other of your acquaintance) as you would not chuſe to aſſociate with. If theſe reſearches prove agreeable, then you may venture to lay down the depoſite money, (as it is called) but if they do not produce the grand maſter's authority by warrant or diſpenſation, you are to look upon them not only as the magma of free maſons, but the very dregs of mankind, who (under the cloak of brotherly love) are ever upon the watch for an opportunity to pick your pockets, and make you con-contemptible into the bargain. * Doubtleſs you will wonder how, or by what means, ſuch abandoned wretches got admittance into a fraternity which boaſt of ſo much honour and virtue, as to level themſelves with kings and princes, eſpecially, if they adhere ſtrictly to the foregoing regulation. To this I anſwer, that ſome of the Landlords,† where the lodges are held, do often recommmend perſons to be made free maſons, and that the lucrative view takes place (too often) where impartiality, honeſty and virtue ought to be the points of ſight. That others have ſtood the teſt of the ſtricteſt ſcrutiny, behaved well for many years, and afterwards fell into all manner of vices, which ſerves to ſhew the inſtability and weakneſs of mankind, and that all the doctrine and laws upon earth (without the grace of God) is not ſufficient to make men wiſe or deter them from evil. Nevertheleſs (in the ſyſtem of free maſonry) there are many ways to mend the manners, poliſh the diſpoſition, correct the Judgment, and refine the taſte of a ſoul virtuouſly inclined. And as the number

* To this I beg leave to add a word or two: The perſons to whom I now ſpeak, are the men of ſome education and an honeſt Character, but in low circumſtances; I ſay, let them firſt conſider their income and families, and know, that free maſonry requires ability, attendance, and a good appearance to maintain and ſupport it's antient and honourable grandeur. Be it alſo remembered, that they have no title to the general charity, until they prove, that they have been formerly in reputable, at leaſt, in tolerable circumſtances.

* For a confirmation hereof read the eighth Regulation, (page 58) where it is ordered, that no perſon ſo made, nor any concerned in making him, ſhall be a grand officer, nor an officer of any particular lodge, nor ſhall any ſuch partake of the general charity, if they ſhould come to want it.

† I do not charge landlords in general with ſuch evil proceedings, becauſe I know many of them that abhor ſiniſter views, and would ſacrifice all pecuniary intereſt, before they would break through any of the ſacred rules or orders of the craft.

number of good and wiſe free-maſons have always greatly exceeded that of the fooliſh and wicked, it would be as abſurd to condemn the whole for part, as it would be in the Jews to condemn Shem and Japhet for the curſe brought upon Ham; or the Chriſtians, to condemm the eleven apoſtles, becauſe Judas turned traitor. But this is not altogether the buſineſs of a guide, therefore I beg leave to reaſſume my proper character, and earneſtly deſire you to ſhun maſon clubs, that is to ſay; lodges formed without authority, for you may reſt fully aſſured, that ſuch clubs are generally compoſed of excluded members, or perſons clandeſtinely made by them, and conſequently incapable of giving proper inſtructions to their pupils. Or admit them capable of giving proper inſtructions, even then; the new brethren will be led in the dark, becauſe it is the intereſt of the rebel party to conceal the eſſentials af the craft, which, if revealed, muſt of courſe prove themſelves to be villains. Therefore, in order to avoid falling into ſuch hands, I earneſtly beg of you, to have no communication with any lodge or ſet of men under the denomination of a free maſons lodge, until they produce the grand maſter's authority, ſigned and ſealed as before mentioned. But having produced ſuch authority, you may then enter in the name of God! where you will be acquainted with myſteries, which are not permitted to be revealed by a guide, eſpecially out of the lodge: And if after ſuch enterance or admiſſion you find that I have miſled you, I do hereby give you

you full liberty to expoſe me as a blind guide &c. but if experience teach you, that my inſtructions (as well as my intentions) were juſt, then I hope you will do me the honour of calling me a faithful brother. And that the God of all light and truth (who is the giver of all good gifts and graces) may bleſs, proſper, and direct you, in all your public and private (lawful) undertakings, is the hearty prayer of,

GENTLEMEN,

Your faithful and obedient ſervant,

Laurence Dermott.

Having

Having taken my leave of the ſtrangers, I now beg leave to addreſs myſelf to the GENTLEMEN OF THE MOST ANTIENT AND HONOURABLE FRATERNITY.

GENTLEMEN and BRETHREN,

SEVERAL eminent craftſmen reſiding in Scotland, Ireland, America and other parts both abroad and at home, have greatly importuned me, to give them ſome account of what is called modern maſonry in London. I cannot be diſpleaſed with ſuch importunities, becauſe I had the like curioſity myſelf, about ſixteen or ſeventeen years ago, when I was firſt introduced into that ſociety. However, before I proceed any farther concerning the difference between antient and modern, I think it my duty, to declare ſolemnly before God and man, that I have not the leaſt antipathy againſt the gentlemen members of the modern ſociety; but, on the contrary, love and reſpect them, becauſe I have found the generality of them to be hearty cocks and good fellows (as the bacchanalian phraſe is) and many of them I believe to be worthy of receiving every bleſſing that good men can aſk or heaven beſtow. I hope that this declaration will acquit me of any deſign of giving offence, eſpecially if the following queries and anſwers be rightly conſidered.

Quere

Quere 1ſt. Whether free maſonry, as practiſed in antient lodges, is univerſal?

Anſwer. Yes.

2d. Whether what is called modern maſonry is univerſal?

Anſwer. No.

3d. Whether there is any material difference between the antient and modern?

Anſ. A great deal, becauſe an antient maſon can not only make himſelf known to his brother, but in caſe of neceſſity can diſcover his very thoughts to him, in the preſence of a modern, without being able to diſtinguiſh that either of them are free maſons.

4th. Whether a modern maſon may, with ſafety, communicate all his ſecrets to an antient maſon?

Anſ. Yes.

5th. Whether an antient maſon may, with the like ſafety, communicate all his ſecrets, to a modern maſon, without further ceremony?

Anſ. No. For as a Science comprehends an Art, (though an art cannot comprehend a ſcience) even ſo antient maſonry contains every thing valuable amongſt the moderns, as well as many other things that cannot be revealed without additional ceremonies.

6th. Whether a perſon, made in the modern manner, and not after the antient cuſtom of the craft, has a right to be called free and accepted, according to the intent and meaning of the words?

Anſ. His being unqualified to appear in a maſter's lodge, according to the univerſal ſyſtem of maſonry, renders the appellation improper.

7th. Whether it is poſſible to initiate or introduce a modern maſon into a royal arch lodge (the very Eſſence of maſonry) without making him go through the antient ceremonies.

Anſ. No.

8th. What Art or Science has been introduced and practiſed in London without receiving the leaſt improvement?

Anſ. Free maſonry.

9th. Whether the preſent members of modern lodges are blameable for deviating ſo much from the old land marks?

Anſ. No. Becauſe the innovation was made in the reign of king George the firſt, and the new form was delivered as orthodox to the preſent members.

10th. Therefore as it is natural for each party, to maintain the orthodoxy of their maſonical preceptors. How ſhall we diſtinguiſh the original and moſt uſeful ſyſtem?

Anſ. The number of antient maſons, compared with the moderns, being as ninety-nine to one, proves the univerſality of the old order, and the utility thereof appears by the love and reſpect ſhewn to the brethren, in conſequence of their ſuperior abilities in converſing with, and diſtinguiſhing the maſons of all countries and denominations, a circumſtance, peculiar to antient maſons.

I am ſo well acquainted with the truth of what I have juſt now inſerted, that I am not in the leaſt apprehenſive of being contradicted. But if any perſon ſhould hereafter labour under the ſpirit of oppoſition, I ſhall (even then) be contented, as I am ſure of having the majority upon my ſide.

Therofore, In order to ſatisfy the importunities of my good Brethren (particularly the Right worſhipful and very worthy Gentlemen of America, who for their charitable diſpoſition, prudent choice of members and good conduct in general, deſerve the unanimous thanks and applauſe of the maſonical world) be it known, that the innovation, already mentioned, aroſe upon the fall of a GRAND MASTER, namely Sir Chriſtopher Wren, who (as Doctor Anderſon ſays) neglected the lodges. The Doctor's aſſertion is certainly true, and I will endeavour to do juſtice unto the memory of Sir Chriſtopher, by relating the real cauſe of ſuch neglect. The famous Sir Chriſtopher Wren, Knight, (Maſter of Arts formerly of Wadham college, Profeſſor of aſtronomy at Greſham and Oxford, Doctor of the civil law, Preſident of the royal ſociety, grand maſter of the moſt antient and honourable fraternity of free and accepted maſons, architect to the crown, who built moſt of the churches in London, laid the firſt ſtone of the glorious cathedral of St. Paul, and lived to finiſh it.) having ſerved the crown upwards of fifty years, was (at the age of ninety) diſplaced from employment, in favour of Mr. William B-nſ-n, who was made ſurveyor of the buildings &c. to his Majeſty King George the firſt. The firſt ſpecimen of Mr. B-nſ-n's ſkill in architecture was a report made to the houſe of Lords, that their houſe and the painted chamber adjoining were in immediate danger of falling; whereupon the Lords met in a committee, to appoint ſome other place to ſit in, while the houſe ſhould be taken down. But it being propoſed to cauſe ſome other builders firſt to inſpect it, they found it in very good condition. The Lords, upon this, were going upon an addreſs to the king, againſt the modern architect, for ſuch a miſrepreſentation, but the Earl of Sunderland, then ſecretary, gave them an aſſurance that his majeſty would remove him.

Such

Such uſage, added to Sir Chriſtopher's great age, was more than enough to make him decline all public aſſemblies. And the maſter maſons then in London were ſo much diſguſted at the treatment of their old and excellent grand maſter, that they would not meet nor hold any communication under the ſanction of his ſucceſſor Mr. B-nſ-n, in ſhort, the brethren were ſtruck with a Lethargy which ſeemed to threaten the London lodges with a final diſſolution.

Notwithſtanding this ſtate of inactivity in London, the lodges in the country, particularly in Scotland and at York, kept up their antient formalities, cuſtoms and uſages, without alteration, adding or diminiſhing, to this hour, from whence they may juſtly be called the moſt antient &c.

About the year 1717 ſome joyous companions, who had paſſed the degree of a craft, (though very ruſty) reſolved to form a lodge for themſelves, in order (by converſation) to recollect what had been formerly dictated to them, or if that ſhould be found impracticable, to ſubſtitute ſomething new, which might for the future paſs for maſonry amongſt themſelves. At this meeting the queſtion was aſked, whether any perſon in the aſſembly knew the Maſter's part, and being anſwered in the negative, it was reſolved, nem. con. that the deficiency ſhould be made up with a new compoſition, and what fragments of the old order found

amongſt them, ſhould be immediately reformed and made more pliable to the humours of the people. Hence it was ordered, that every perſon (during the time of his initiation) ſhould wear boots, ſpurs, a ſword and ſpectacles. That every apprentice (going and coming from work) ſhould carry the plumb rule upon his right ſide, contrary to the antients. That every fellow craft ſhould carry the level upon his left ſide, and not upon his right ſide, as the antients did. And that every perſon, dignified with the title of a maſter maſon, ſhould wear a ſquare pendant to his right leg. It was alſo thought expedient to aboliſh the old cuſtom of ſtudying Geometry in the lodge, and ſome of the young brethren made it appear, that a good knife and fork in the hands of a dexterous brother (over proper materials) would give greater ſatisfaction, and add more to the rotundity of the lodge, than the beſt ſcale and compaſs in Europe, and farthermore added, that a line, a ſquare, a parallelogram, a rhombus, a rhomboides, a triangle, a trapezium, a circle, a ſemicircle, a quadrant, a parabola, a cube, a parallelopipedon, a priſm, a pyramid, a cylinder, a cone, a priſmoid, a cylindroid, a ſphere, a ſpheroid, a parabolick, fruſtrums, ſegments, polygons, ellipſis and irregular figures of all ſorts might be drawn and repreſented upon Bread, Beef, Mutton, Fowls, Pies &c. as demonſtratively as upon ſlates or ſheets of paper; and that the uſe of the globes might be taught and explained as clearly and briefly upon two bottles, as upon Mr. Senex's globes of 28 inches diameter; diameter; and we are told, that from this improvement proceeded the laudable cuſtom of charging to a public health at every third ſentence that is ſpoke in the lodge. There was another old cuſtom that gave umbrage to the young architects, i. e. the wearing of aprons, which made the gentlemen look like ſo many mechanicks, therefore it was propoſed, that no brother (for the future) ſhould wear an apron. This propoſal was rejected by the oldeſt members, who declared, that the aprons were all the ſigns of maſonry then remaining amongſt them, and for that reaſon they would keep and wear them. It was then propoſed, that (as they were reſolved to wear aprons) they ſhould be turned upſide down, in order to avoid appearing mechanical. This propoſal took place and anſwered the deſign, for that, which was formerly the lower part, was now faſtened round the abdomen, and the bib and ſtrings hung downwards, dangling in ſuch manner as might convince the ſpectators, that there was not a working maſon amongſt them.

Agreeable as this alteration might ſeem to the gentlemen, nevertheleſs it was attended with an ugly circumſtance: for, in taverſing the lodge, the brethren were ſubject to tread upon the ſtrings, which often cauſed them to fall with great violence, ſo that it was thought neceſſary, to invent ſeveral methods of walking, in order to avoid treading upon the ſtrings. In brief, every meeting produced an addition or a palinody. Amongſt other things they ſeized on the ſtone maſons Arms, * which that good natured company has permitted them to wear to this day, for which reaſon ſeveral of the brethren have turned their aprons in the old faſhion, and affect to immitate the operative maſons. And it is pleaſant enough, to ſee ſixty or ſeventy able men about a little Lewis and capſtan &c. erected upon a mahogany platform (purchaſed at an extravagant price) all employed in raiſing a little ſquare piece of marble, which the weakeſt man in company could take between his finger and thumb and throw it over the houſe.

I have the greateſt veneration for ſuch implements as are truly emblematical or uſeful in refining our moral notions, and I am well convinced that the cuſtom and uſe of them in lodges are both antient and inſtructive, but at the ſame time I abhor and deteſt the unconſtitutional fopperies of cunning avaricious tradeſmen, invented and introduced amongſt the moderns with no other deſign but to extract large ſums of money, which ought to be applied to more noble and charitable uſes. There is now in my neighbourhood a large piece of iron ſcrole work, ornamented with foliage &c. painted and gilt (the whole at an incredible expence) and placed before the maſter's chair, with a gigantic ſword fixed therein, during the communication

* The operative or ſtone maſons are the 30th company in London, they were incorporated by Charles the ſecond, and have a hall in Baſinghall ſtreet, the number of their livery men about ſeventy, and the livery fine five pounds.

munication of the members, a thing contrary to all the private and public rules of maſonry: all implements of war and bloodſhed being confined to the lodge door, from the day that the flaming ſword was placed in the Eaſt of the garden of Eden, to the day that the ſagacious modern placed his grand ſword of State in the midſt of his lodge. Nor is it uncommon for a tyler to receive ten or twelve ſhillings for drawing two ſign poſts with chalk &c. and writing Jamaica rum upon one, and Barbadoes rum upon the other, and all this (I ſuppoſe) for no other uſe, than to diſtinguiſh where theſe liquors are to be placed in the lodge.

There are many other unconſtitutional proceedings, which (to avoid giving offence) I paſs over in ſilence. And hope, that I ſhall live to ſee a general conformity and univerſal unity between the worthy maſons of all denominations. This is the moſt earneſt wiſhes and ardent prayers of,

GENTLEMEN and BRETHREN,

Your moſt ſincere friend,

Obedient ſervant,

and faithful brother,

LAURENCE DERMOTT, Secretary.

N. B. The free maſons arms in the upper part of the frontis piece of this book, was found in the collection of the famous and learned hebrewiſt, architect and brother, Rabi Jacob Jehudah Leon. This gentleman, at the requeſt of the ſtates of Holland, built a model of Solomon's temple. The deſign of this undertaking was to build a temple in Holland, but upon ſurveying the model it was adjudged, that the united provinces were not rich enough to pay for it; whereupon the States generouſly beſtowed the model upon the builder, notwithſtanding they had already paid him his demand, which was very great. This model was exhibited to public view (by authority) at Paris and Vienna, and afterwards in London, by a patent under the great ſeal of England, and ſigned Killigrew in the reign of King Charles the ſecond. At the ſame time, Jacob Judah Leon publiſhed a deſcription of the tabernacle and the temple, and dedicated it to his Majeſty, and in the years 1759 and 1760 I had the pleaſure of peruſing and examining both theſe curioſities. The arms are emblazoned thus, quarterly per ſquares, counterchanged Vert. In the firſt quarter Azure a lyon rampant Or, in the ſecond quarter Or, an ox paſſant ſable; in the third quarter Or, a man with hands erect, proper robed, crimſon and ermin; in the fourth quarter Azure, an eagle diſplayed, Or. Creſt, the holy ark of the covenant, proper, ſupported by Cherubims. Motto, Kodes la Adonai, i. e. Holineſs to the Lord.

To this I beg leave to add what I have read concerning theſe arms.

The learned Spencer ſays, the Cherubims had the face of a man, the wings of an eagle, the back and mane of a lion, and the feet of a calf. De Legib. Hebr. lib. 3. diſſ. 5. ch. 2.

The prophet Ezekiel ſays, they had four forms, a man, a lion, an ox, and an eagle.

When the Iſraelites were in the wilderneſs, and encamped in four cohorts, the ſtandard of the tribe of Judah carried a lion, the tribe of Ephraim an ox, the tribe of Ruben a man, and the tribe of Dan an eagle; thoſe four ſtandards compoſed a Cherubim; therefore God choſe to ſit upon Cherubims bearing the forms of thoſe animals, to ſignify, that he was the leader and king of the cohorts of the Iſraelites. Trad. of the Heb.

Bochart ſays, that they repreſented the nature and miniſtry of angels, by the lion's form is ſignified their ſtrength, generoſity and majeſty; by that of the ox, their conſtancy and aſſiduity in executing the commands of God; by their human ſhape their humanity and kindneſs; and by that of the eagle, their agility and ſpeed. Bochart de animal. ſacr. P. 1.

As theſe were the arms of the maſons that built the tabernacle and the temple, there is not the leaſt doubt of their being the proper arms of the moſt antient and honourable fraternity of free and accepted maſons, and the continual practice, formalities and tradition, in all regular lodges, from the loweſt degree to the moſt high, i. e. THE HOLY ROYAL ARCH, confirms the truth hereof.

AHIMAN

AHIMAN REZON.

BEFORE we enter into the cauſe or motive of the firſt inſtitution of Free-Maſonry, it is neceſſary in ſome meaſure to ſhew the Excellency of Secrecy, and with what great Care it is to be kept.

ONE of the principal Parts that makes a man be deemed wiſe, is his intelligent ſtrength and ability to cover and conceal ſuch honeſt Secrets as are committed to him, as well as his own ſerious affairs. And whoever will peruſe ſacred and profane hiſtory, ſhall find a great number of virtuous attempts (in peace and war) that never reached their deſigned ends, but were ſhaken into ſhivers and defeated, only through defect of ſecret Concealment; and yet, beſides ſuch unhappy prevention, infinite evils have thereby enſued. But before all other Examples, let us conſider that which excels all the reſt, derived ever from God himſelf. Who ſo eſpecially preſerves his own ſecrets to himſelf, never letting any man know what ſhould happen on the morrow ; nor could the wiſe men in ages paſt, divine what ſhould befall us in this Age : Whereby we may readily diſcern, that God himſelf is well pleaſed with Secrecy. And although (for man's good) the Lord has been pleaſed to reveal ſome things, yet it is impoſſible at any time to change or alter his Determination, in regard whereof the reverend wiſe men of ancient times, evermore affected to perform their intentions ſecretly.

We read that Cato the Cenſor often ſaid to his Friends, that of three things he had good reaſon to repent, if ever he neglected the true Performance of them : The firſt, if he divulged any Secret ; the ſecond, if he adventured on the Water when he might ſtay on dry land ; and thirdly, if he ſhould let any day neglectedly eſcape him without doing ſome good Action. The latter two are well worthy of obſervation ; but the firſt Concerns our preſent undertaking. Alexander having received divers letters of great importance from his mother ; after he had read them, in the preſence of none but his dear friend Epheſtion and himſelf, he drew forth his ſignet which ſealed his moſt private letters, and without ſpeaking ſet it upon Epheſtion's Lips ; intimating thereby, that he in whoſe boſom a man buries his ſecrets, ſhould have his lips locked up from revealing them.

AMONG the reſt it may not be diſagreeable to the reader to peruſe the following ſtory, as told by Aulus Gellius in his Attic Nights, and by Macrobius in his Saturnals.

THE ſenators of Rome, at their uſual ſitting in the ſenate-houſe, had conſtituted a Cuſtom among themſelves, that each brother ſenator who had a ſon, ſhould be admitted with his father to abide in the ſenate-houſe during their ſitting, or depart if occaſion required; nor was this favour general, but extended only to noblemen's ſons, who were tutored in ſuch a manner as enabled them to become wiſe governors, capable of keeping their own ſecrets. About this time it happened that the ſenators ſat in conſultation of a very important cauſe, ſo that they ſtayed much longer than uſual, and the concluſion referred to the following day, with expreſs charge of ſecrecy in the mean time. Among the other noblemen's ſons who had been at this weighty buſineſs, was that faithful youth the ſon of the grave Papirus, whoſe family was one of the moſt noble and illuſtrious in all Rome.

THE young lad being come home, his mother (as moſt of the fair-ſex are highly affected with novelty) intreated him to tell her what ſtrange caſe had been that day debated in the ſenate, that had power to detain them ſo long beyond their uſual hours: The virtuous and noble youth courteouſly told her that it was a buſineſs nót in his power to reveal, he being in a ſolemn manner commanded to ſilence: Upon hearing this anſwer, her deſires became more earneſt in ſtricter enquiries into the caſe, and nothing but intelligence thereof could any way content her: So that firſt by fair ſpeeches and intreaties, with liberal promiſes, ſhe endeavoured to break open this poor little casket of ſecrecy: But finding theſe efforts in vain, to ſtripes and violent threats was her next flight; becauſe force may compel, where lenity cannot.

THE admired noble ſpirit finding a mother's threats to be very harſh, but her ſtripes more bitter than any thing beſide; comparing his love to her as his mother, with the duty he owed to his father; the one mighty, but the other impulſive; he lays her and her fond conceit in one ſcale; his father, his own honour, and the ſolemn injunctions to ſecrecy, in the other ſcale; and finding her intrinſic weight as being his mother, but lighter than wind being thus gone out of herſelf. Whetting his tender wit upon the ſandy ſtone of her edging importunity, to appeaſe her, and preſerve his own honour by remaining faithful, he thus reſolved her:

MADAM, and dear mother, you may well blame the ſenate for their long ſitting, at leaſt for calling in Queſtion a caſe ſo impertinent; for except cept the wives of the ſenators be admitted to conſult thereon, there can be no hope of a concluſion: I ſpeak this but out of my young apprehenſion, for I know their gravity may eaſily confound me; and yet, whether nature or duty ſo inſtruct me, I cannot tell: But to them it ſeems neceſſary, for the increaſe of people, and for the public good, that every ſenator ſhould be allowed two wives; or otherwiſe, their wives two husbands: I ſhall hardly under one roof call two men by the name of father; I had rather call two women by the name of mother. This is the queſtion, mother; and to-morrow it muſt have determination.

THE Mother hearing this, and his ſeeming unwilling to reveal it, took it for infallible truth: Her blood quickly fired, and rage enſued. I need not put the reader in mind that ſuch ſudden heats ſeldom admit of conſideration; but on the contrary, hurry the ſenſes and faculties further to raſhneſs, and other follies; by which they are rendered incapable of doing themſelves ſuch good actions, or ſervice, as their caſe often require: So without requiring any other counſel, ſhe immediately ſent to the other ladies and matrons of Rome, to acquaint them with this weighty affair, wherein the peace and welfare of their whole lives was ſo nearly concerned. This melancholy news blew up ſuch a brain-ſick paſſion, that the ladies immediately aſſembled; and though (ſome ſay) that a parliament

parliament of women are very ſeldom governed by one ſpeaker, yet this affair being ſo urgent, the haſte as pertinent, and the caſe (on their behalf) merely indulgent, the revealing woman muſt prolocute for herſelf and the reſt. And on the next morning ſuch a din was at the ſenate door, for admiſſion to ſit with their huſbands in this wonderous conſultation, as if all Rome had been in an uproar. Their minds muſt not be known before they have audience; which (though againſt all order) being granted, ſuch an oration was made by the woman ſpeaker, with requeſt that women might have two huſbands rather than men two wives, who could ſcarcely content one, &c. Upon the riddle's ſolution, the noble youth was highly commended for his fidelity, and the ladies greatly confounded, and departed very likely with bluſhing cheeks. Nevertheleſs, to avoid the like Inconveniency for the future, it was determined that thence forward they ſhould bring their ſons no more into the ſenate; only young Papirus, who was freely accepted, and his ſecrecy and diſcreet policy not only applauded, but himſelf with titles of honour dignified and rewarded.

Nor ſhould we forget the faithful Anaxarchus (as related by Pliny, in his ſeventh book and twenty-third chapter) who was taken in order to force his ſecrets from him, bit his tongue in the midſt midſt between his teeth, and afterwards threw it in the tyrant's face.

THE Athenians had a ſtatue of braſs, which they bowed to; the figure was made without a tongue, to declare ſecrecy thereby.

LIKEWISE the Egyptians worſhipped Harpocrates, the god of ſilence; for which reaſon he is always pictured holding his finger on his mouth.

THE Romans had a goddeſs of ſilence named Angerona, which was pictured like Harpocrates, holding her finger on her mouth, in token of ſecrecy.

THE ſervants of Plancus are much commended, becauſe no torment could make them confeſs the ſecret which their maſter intruſted them with.

LIKEWISE the ſervant of Cato the orator was cruelly tormented, but nothing could make him reveal the ſecrets of his maſter.

Quintus Curtius tells us, that the Perſians held it as an inviolable law to puniſh moſt grievouſly (and much more than any other treſpaſs) him that diſcovered any ſecret; for confirmation thereof, he ſays, that king Darius, being vanquiſhed by Alexander, had made his eſcape ſo far as to hide himſelf where he thought he might reſt ſecure; no tortures whatſoever, or liberal promiſes of recompence, could prevail with the faithful brethren that knew it, or compel them to diſcloſe it to any perſon: And furthermore ſays, that no man ought to commit mit any matter of conſequence to him that cannot truly keep a ſecret.

Lycurgus, among his continual laws, would have every man keep ſecret whatſoever was done or ſaid: For this reaſon the Athenians were wont (when they met at any feaſt) that the moſt ancient among them ſhould ſhew every brother the door whereat they entered, ſaying, Take heed that not ſo much as one word paſs out from hence, of whatſoever ſhall here be acted or ſpoken.

THE firſt thing that Pythagoras taught his ſcholars was to be ſilent, therefore (for a certain time) he kept them without ſpeaking, to the end that they might the better learn to preſerve the valuable ſecrets he had to communicate to them, and never to ſpeak but when time required, expreſſing thereby that ſecrecy was the rareſt virtue: Would to God that the maſters of our preſent lodges would put the ſame in practice.

Ariſtotle was demanded what thing appeared moſt difficult to him; he anſwered, to be ſecret and ſilent.

To this purpoſe St. Ambroſe, in his offices, placeth among the principal foundations of virtue, the patient gift of ſilence.

THE wiſe king Solomon ſays in his proverbs, that a king ought not to drink wine, becauſe drunkenneſs is an enemy to ſecrecy; and in his opinion, he is not worthy to reign that cannot keep his own ſecrets

ſecrets; he furthermore ſays, that he which diſcovers ſecrets is a traitor, and he that conceals them is a faithful brother: He likewiſe ſays, that he that refraineth his tongue is wiſe: And again, he that keeps his tongue, keeps his ſoul. I could mention many other circumſtances of the excellency of ſecrecy; and I dare venture to ſay that the greateſt honour, juſtice, truth, and fidelity, has been always found amongſt thoſe who could keep their own and others Secrets; and this is moſt nobly ſet forth by Horace, who ſays:

The man reſolv'd and ſteady to his truſt,
Inflexible to ill, and obſtinately juſt;
May the rude rabble's inſolence deſpiſe,
Their ſenſeleſs clamours and tumultuous cries;
The tyrant's fierceneſs he beguiles,
And the ſtern brow and the harſh voice defies,
And with ſuperior greatneſs ſmiles:
Not the rough whirlwind, that deforms
Adria's black gulph, and vexes it with ſtorms;
The ſtubborn virtue of his ſoul can move:
Not the red arm of angry Jove,
That flings the thunder from the ſky,
And gives it rage to roar and ſtrength to fly:

Should the whole frame of nature round him break,
In ruin and confuſion hurl'd;
He unconcern'd wou'd hear the mighty crack,
And ſtand ſecure amidſt a falling world.

THEREFORE I am of opinion, that if ſecrecy and ſilence be duly conſidered, they will be found moſt neceſſary to qualify a man for any buſineſs of importance: If this be granted, I am confident that no man will dare to diſpute that Free-Maſons are ſuperior to all other men, in concealing their ſecrets, from times immemorial: which the power of gold, that often has betrayed kings and princes, and ſometimes overturned whole empires, nor the moſt cruel puniſhments could never extort the ſecret (even) from the weakeſt member of the whole fraternity.

THEREFORE I humbly preſume it will of conſequence be granted, that the Welfare and good of mankind was the cauſe or motive of ſo grand an Inſtitution as Free-Maſonry (no art yet ever being ſo extenſively uſeful) which not only tends to protect its members from external injuries, but to poliſh the ruſty diſpoſitions of iniquitous minds, and alſo to detain them within the pleaſant bounds of true religion, morality and virtue; for ſuch are the precepts of this royal art, that if thoſe who have the honour of being members thereof would but live according to the true principles of the ancient craft, every man that's endowed with the leaſt ſpark of honour or honeſty, muſt of courſe approve their actions, and conſequently endeavour to follow their ſteps. And although very few or none of the brethren arrive to the ſublimity and beautiful contrivance of Hiram Abif; yet the very Enemies of Free-Maſonry muſt own, that it is the moſt renowned ſociety that ever was, is now, or (perhaps) ever will be upon earth; the following true deſcription of the royal art, will clearly ſhew its great uſe to mankind.

Hail mighty ART! gracious gift of heaven,
To aid mankind by our creator given:
It was you alone that gave the ark its form,
Which ſav'd the faithful from the impending ſtorm;
When ſinful Cowans were grov'ling in the tide,
The Maſons ark triumphantly did ride
O'er mighty waves, nor car'd they where it ſteer'd
Till floods abated and dry land appear'd:
On Arraret's mount, after the mighty ſtorm,
There ſtood their ark and open'd lodge in form;
There the good maſon of his own accord,
An altar built to ſerve the heavenly lord;
Returned thanks with off'ring ſacrifice,
Which pleaſed Jove: and to himſelf he cries,
For ſake of man I'll curſe the ground no more,
Nor ſmite the living as I've done before:
While earth remain this bleſſing I'll beſtow,
A proper time when you your ſeed may ſow;
The harveſt-time to bleſs the lab'ring ſwain,
With fruitful crops for all his care and pain:
Nights, days and ſeaſons ſhall ſurround this ball,
Nor ſhall they ceaſe untill the end of all:
And to confirm my promiſe unto thee,
Amidſt the clouds my bow a witneſs be;

An heav'nly arch ſhews how God ſav'd the lives
Of maſons four, likewiſe their happy wives.
Such the bleſſings of each time and ſeaſon,
God has promis'd to that maſter-maſon ;
By which we ſee that mighty things were done
By this great art, ſince firſt the world began.
What mortal living, whether far or near,
Around the globe within the heav'nly ſphere,
Can name one art ſo much by God approv'd,
As maſonry in David whom he lov'd;
Witneſs Moriah where God appear'd to man,
And gave the prince the holy temple's plan ;
Which charge Solomon after did fulfill,
By aid from Tyre and Hiram's mighty ſkill.
This is the art that did the world excel,
And pleas'd the lord of hoſts to come and dwell
Amongſt the men ; who did the temple frame,
To worſhip God and keep his ſacred name.
By Maſon's art aſpiring domes appear,
Where God is worſhip'd ſtill in truth and fear :
By maſons art the greedy miſer's breaſt,
(Tho' iron-bound, much cloſer than his cheſt)
Compaſſion feels, values not his ſtore,
And freely gives what he ne'er thought before :
By Maſons art the buſy tongue doth fall
Before the throne, when awful ſilence call :
By Maſons art the wings of looſe deſire,
Are clipt ſhort, prevents their ſoaring higher ;
The vicious mind the ancient craft reſtrain,
From immodeſt bents, unlawful and profane :
By maſons art the puny foppiſh aſs,
(Mankind's diſgrace, and ſport of ev'ry laſs)

Soon quits his folly, and more wiſer grown,
Looks on himſelf as one before unknown:
By Maſons art the proud enſigns of ſtate,
(Ambition's nurs'ry, and her lofty ſeat)
Are deemed vain and uſeleſs toys,
Free-Maſons prize more ſolid joys.

But methinks I hear ſome of my readers ſay, ſurely if Free-Maſonry be ſuch as it is here repreſented, the Brotherhood moſt certainly are the happieſt men living; and yet, on the contrary, we often meet ſome very miſerable, others very great knaves, and a number of ignorant, illiterate ſtupid fools of the ſociety; or at leaſt would endeavour to make the World believe ſo. This has been duly conſidered, and anſwered, in the inſtructions for ſuch as would become Free-Maſons. In the mean time I am well aſſured, that none but ſtrangers to the craft, and ungenerous enemies to good ſociety, will doubt the veracity of what is here inſerted concerning Free-Maſonry. And for further ſatisfaction to my female readers, and ſuch of the male ſex as have not the honour of being initiated into the myſtery, I here beg leave to treat of the principles of the craft (ſo far as comes under the limitation of my pen) which I hope will meet with a juſt admiration, becauſe they are founded upon religion, morality, brotherly-love, and good fellowſhip.

A MASON is obliged by his tenure to believe firmly in the true worſhip of the eternal God, as well well as in all thoſe ſacred records which the dignitaries and fathers of the church have compiled and publiſhed for the uſe of all good men: So that no one who rightly underſtands the art, can poſſibly tread in the irreligious paths of the unhappy libertine, or be induced to follow the arrogant profeſſors of atheiſm or deiſm; neither is he to be ſtained with the groſs errors of blind ſuperſtition, but may have the liberty of embracing what faith he ſhall think proper, provided at all times he pays a due reverence to his creator, and by the world deals with honour and honeſty, ever making that golden precept the ſtandard-rule of his actions, which engages, To do unto all men as he would they ſhould do unto him: For the craft, inſtead of entering into idle and unneceſſary diſputes concerning the different opinions and perſuaſions of men, admits into the fraternity all that are good and true; whereby it hath brought about the means of reconciliation amongſt perſons, who, without that aſſiſtance, would have remained at perpetual variance.

A MASON is a lover of quiet; is always ſubject to the civil powers, provided they do not infringe upon the limitted bounds of religion and reaſon: And it was never yet known, that a real craftſman was concerned in any dark plot, deſigns or contrivances againſt the ſtate, becauſe the welfare of the nation is his paculiar care; ſo that from the higheſt to the loweſt ſtep of magiſtracy due regard and deference is paid by him.

BUT as Maſonry hath at ſeveral times felt the injurious effects of war, bloodſhed, and devaſtation, it was a ſtronger engagement to the Craftſmen to act agreeable to the rules of peace and loyalty, the many proofs of which behaviour hath occaſioned the ancient kings and powers to protect and defend them. But if a brother ſhould be ſo far unhappy as to rebel againſt the ſtate, he would meet with no countenance from his fellows; nor would they keep any private converſe with him, whereby the government might have cauſe to be jealous, or take the leaſt umbrage.

A MASON, in regard to himſelf, is carefully to avoid all manner of intemperance or exceſs, which might obſtruct him in the performance of the neceſſary duties of his laudable profeſſion, or lead him into any crimes which would reflect diſhonour upon the ancient fraternity.

HE is to treat his inferiors as he would have his ſuperiors deal with him, wiſely conſidering that the original of mankind is the ſame; and though maſonry diveſts no man of his honour, yet does the craft admit that ſtrictly to purſue the paths of virtue, whereby a clear conſcience may be preſerved, is the only method to make any man noble.

A MASON

A MASON is to be ſo far benevolent, as never to ſhut his ear unkindly to the complaints of wretched poverty; but when a brother is oppreſſed by want, he is in a peculiar manner to liſten to his ſufferings with attention; in conſequence of which pity muſt flow from his breaſt, and relief without prejudice according to his capacity.

A MASON is to pay due obedience to the authority of his maſter and preſiding officers, and to behave himſelf meekly amongſt his brethren; neither neglecting his uſual occupation for the ſake of company, in running from one lodge to another; nor quarrel with the ignorant multitude, for their ridiculous aſperſions concerning it: But at his leiſure hours he is required to ſtudy the arts and ſciences with a diligent mind, that he may not only perform his duty to his great Creator, but alſo to his neighbour and himſelf: For to walk humbly in the ſight of God, to do juſtice, and love mercy, are the certain characteriſtics of a real free and accepted antient maſon: Which qualifications I humbly hope they will poſſeſs to the end of time; and I dare venture to ſay, that every true brother will join with me in, Amen.

THE benefits ariſing from a ſtrict obſervance of the principles of the craft, are ſo apparent that I muſt believe every good Man would be fond to profeſs and practiſe the ſame; becauſe thoſe principles

ples tend to promote the happineſs of life, as they are founded on the baſis of wiſdom and virtue.

In the firſt place; our privileges and inſtructions, when rightly made uſe of, are not only productive of our welfare on this ſide of the grave, but even our eternal happineſs hereafter.

For the craft is founded on ſo ſolid a baſis that it will never admit blaſphemy, lewdneſs, ſwearing, evil-plotting, or controverſy; and tho' they are not all of the ſame opinion in matters of faith, yet they are ever in one mind in matters of maſonry; that is, to labour juſtly, not to eat any man's bread for nought, but to the utmoſt of our capacity to love and ſerve each other, as brethren of the ſame houſhold ought to do: Wiſely judging, that it is as great an abſurdity in one man to quarrel with another becauſe he will not believe as he does, as it would be in him to be angry becauſe he was not exactly of the ſame ſize and countenance, &c.

Therefore to afford ſuccour to the diſtreſſed, to divide our bread with the induſtrious poor, and to put the miſguided traveller into his way, are qualifications inherent in the craft and ſuitable to its dignity, and ſuch as the worthy members of that great body have at all times ſtrove with indefatigable pains to accompliſh.

These and ſuch like benefits, ariſing from a ſtrict obſervance of the principles of the craft (as numbers of brethren have lately experienced) if duly conſidered, will be found not only to equal but to exceed any ſociety in being.

If ſo, the worthy members of this great and uſeful ſociety, can never be too careful in the election of members; I mean, a thorough knowledge of the character and circumſtance of a candidate that begs to be initiated into the myſtery of freemaſonry.

Upon this depends the welfare or deſtruction of the craft; for as regularity, virtue, and concord, are the only ornaments of human nature, (which is often too prone to act in different capacities) ſo that the happineſs of life depends, in a great meaſure, on our own election and a prudent choice of thoſe ſteps.

For human ſociety cannot ſubſiſt without concord, and the maintenance of mutual good offices; for, like the working of an arch of ſtone, it would fall to the ground provided one piece did not properly ſupport another.

In former times every man (at his requeſt) was not admitted into the craft, (tho' perhaps of a good and moral reputation) nor allowed to ſhare the benefits of our antient and noble inſtitution, unleſs he was endued with ſuch ſkill in maſonry, as he might thereby be able to improve the art, either in plan or workmanſhip; or had ſuch an affluence of fortune as ſhould enable him to employ, honour, and protect the craftſmen.

I would not be underſtood, by this, to mean that no reputable tradeſmen ſhould receive any of our benefits; but, on the contrary, am of opinion that they are valuable members of the commonwealth, and often have proved themſelves real ornaments to lodges.

THOSE whom I aim at, are the miſerable wretches of low-life, (often introduced by excluded men *) ſome of whom can neither read nor write; and when [by the aſſiſtance of maſonry] they are admitted into the company of their betters, they too often act beyond their capacities; and under pretence of ſearching for knowledge, they fall into ſcenes of gluttony or drunkenneſs, and thereby neglect their neceſſary occupation and injure their poor families, who imagine they have a juſt cauſe to pour out all their exclamations and invectives

* That is, men excluded from their lodges for miſdemeanors, &c. who (finding themſelves deemed unworthy of ſo noble a ſociety) ſtill endeavour to make the reſt of mankind believe, that they are good and true, and have full power and authority to admit, enter, and make free-maſons, when and whereſoever they pleaſe, &c. Theſe traders, (though but few in number) aſſociate together, and for any mean conſideration admit any perſon to what little they know of the craft. Little I ſay, for I honeſtly aſſure my readers, that no man who rightly underſtands the craft, can be ſo blind as to trample over its ancient landmarks; therefore all victuallers, &c. ought to be very cautious of entertaining ſuch, from whom neither benefit nor credit can be expected. See New Regulation, VIII.

againſt the whole body of free-maſonry, without conſidering or knowing that our conſtitutions and principles are quite oppoſite to ſuch baſe proceedings.

THE next thing to be conſidered is the choice of officers to rule and govern the lodge, according to the ancient and wholeſome laws of our conſtitution; and this is a matter of great concern, for the officers of a lodge are not only bound to advance and promote the welfare of their own particular lodge, but alſo whatſoever may tend to the good of the fraternity in general.

THEREFORE no man ought to be nominated or put in ſuch election, but ſuch as by his known ſkill and merit, is deemed worthy of performance, viz. He muſt be well acquainted with all the private and public rules and orders of the craft; he ought to be ſtrictly honeſt, humane of nature, patient in injuries, modeſt in converſation, grave in counſel and advice, and (above all) conſtant in amity and faithful in ſecrecy *.

SUCH candidates well deſerve to be choſen the rulers and governors of their reſpective lodges, to whom the members are to be courteous and obedient,

* A man may poſſeſs all theſe good qualifications, and yet (if in low circumſtances) be incapable of filling his office with credit to the lodge or himſelf: and this I recommend as a matter well worth the conſideration of all the conſtituents.

dient, and, by their wiſe and ancient dictates, may learn to deſpiſe the over-covetous, impatient, contentious preſumptious, arrogant, and conceited prattlers, the bane of human ſociety.

HERE I cannot forbear ſaying, that I have known men whoſe intentions were very honeſt, and without any evil deſign commit great errors, and ſometimes been the deſtruction of good lodges; and this occaſioned by their brethren hurrying them indiſcreetly into offices, wherein their ſlender knowledge of maſonry rendered them incapable of executing the buſineſs committed to their charge, to the great detriment of the craft and their own diſhonour.

AMONGST the qualities and principles of the craft, I have given a hint concerning the behaviour of a maſon in the lodge, to which I beg he may add the few following lines, viz. he is to pay due reſpect, and be obedient (in all reaſonable matters) to the maſter and preſiding officers: He muſt not curſe, ſwear, nor offer to lay wagers; nor uſe any lewd or unbecoming language, in derogation of GOD's NAME, and corruption of good manners; nor behave himſelf ludicrouſly, nor jeſtingly, while the lodge is engaged in what is ſerious and ſolemn: Neither is he to introduce, ſupport, nor mention any diſpute or controverſy about religion or politics; nor force any brother to eat, drink, or ſtay againſt his inclination; nor do or ſay any thing that may be offenſive, or hinder a free and innocent converſation ; leaſt he ſhould break the good harmony, and defeat the laudable deſigns and purpoſes, of the ancient and honourable fraternity.

And I honeſtly recommend free-maſonry, as the moſt ſovereign medicine to purge out the above, or ſuch other vices ; and regular lodges, as the only ſeminaries where men (in the moſt pleaſant and cleareſt manner) may hear, underſtand, and learn their duty to God ; and alſo to their neighbours. And this without the multiplicity of ſpiteful and malicious words, long arguments, or fierce debates ; which have been made uſe of, among miſtaken mortals, upwards of a thouſand years paſt : And inſtead of uniting men in one ſacred band (as the ſervants of God, and brethren of the ſame houſhold) have divided them into as many different opinions, as there were (not only languages, but even) men at the confuſion of Babel.

As to the behaviour of the brethren when out of lodge, I hope the ſhort ſpace between each lodge-night will not admit of forgetfulneſs of the decency and good decorum obſerved in the lodge, which may ſerve them as an unerring rule for their behaviour and conduct in all other companies and places ; and like the worſhipful diſcreet maſter of a lodge, rule, govern, and inſtruct their families at home in the fear of God and love of their neighbours, bours, while they themſelves imitate the member's obedience, &c. in paying due reſpect to their ſuperiors.

THESE few hints may ſerve to put the brethren in mind of the duty incumbent on them as free-maſons; and likewiſe, how to behave themſelves in ſuch a manner as may be acceptable to God, agreeable to the principles of the craft, and much to their own honour: But for further ſatisfaction to my readers in general, I ſhall here inſert the ſeveral old charges of free and accepted maſons.

CHARGE I.

Concerning GOD and RELIGION.

A MASON is obliged by his tenure to obſerve the moral law as a true NOACHIDA*; and if he rightly underſtands the craft, he will never be a ſtupid atheiſt nor an irreligious libertine, nor act againſt conſcience.

IN antient times, the chriſtian maſons were charged to comply with the chriſtian uſages of each country where they travelled or worked; being found in all nations, even of divers religions.

THEY are generally charged to adhere to that religion in which all men agree (leaving each brother ther to his own particular opinion; ) that is, to be good men and true, men of honour and honesty, by whatever names, religions, or persuasions they may be distinguished; for they all agree in the three great articles of Noah, enough to preserve the cement of the lodge.

* Sons of Noah, the firſt name of Free-Maſons.

THUS masonry is the center of their union, and the happy means of conciliating persons that otherwise must have remained at a perpetual distance.

CHARGE II.

Of the CIVIL MAGISTRATE, supreme and subordinate.

A MASON must be a peaceable subject, never to be concerned in plots against the state, nor disrespectful to inferior magistrates. Of old, kings, princes, and states, encouraged the fraternity for their loyalty, whoever flourished most in times of peace; but though a brother is not to be countenanced in his rebellion against the state, yet, if convicted of no other crime, his relation to the lodge remains indefeasible.

CHARGE III.

Concerning a LODGE.

A Lodge is a place where maſons meet to work in; hence the aſſembly, or organized body of Free-Maſons, is called a lodge; juſt as the word church is expreſſive both of the congregation and the place of worſhip.

EVERY brother ſhould belong to ſome particular lodge, and cannot be abſent without incurring cenſure, if not neceſſarily detained.

THE men made maſons muſt be free-born (or no bondmen,) of mature age, and of good report; hail and ſound, not deformed or diſmembered, at the time of their making; but no woman, no Eunuch.

WHEN men of quality, eminence, wealth, and learning, apply to be made, they are to be reſpectfully accepted, after due examination; for ſuch often prove good lords (or founders) of work, and will not employ Cowans when true Maſons can be had; they alſo make the beſt officers of lodges, and the beſt deſigners, to the honour and ſtrength of the lodge; nay, from among them the fraternity can have a noble GRAND MASTER; but thoſe brethren are equally ſubject to the charges and regulations, except in what more immediately concerns operative maſons.

and

C H A R G E IV.

Of MAST'ERS, WARDENS, FELLOWS, and APPRENTICES.

ALL preferments among maſons, is grounded upon real worth and perſonal merit only, not upon ſeniority. No maſter ſhould take an apprentice that is not the ſon of honeſt parents, a perfect youth without maim or defect in his body, and capable of learning the myſteries of the art; that ſo the lords (or founders) may be well ſerved, and the craft not deſpiſed; and that when of age and expert, he may become an entered apprentice, or a free-maſon of the loweſt degree; and upon his improvements, a fellow-craft and a maſter-maſon, capable to undertake the lord's work.

THE wardens are choſen from among the maſter maſons, and no brother can be a maſter of a lodge till he has acted as warden ſomewhere, except in extraordinary caſes, or when a lodge is to be formed, and none ſuch to be had, for then three maſter maſons, tho' never maſters nor wardens of lodges before, may be conſtituted maſter and wardens of that new lodge.

BUT no number, without three maſter-maſons, can form a lodge; and none can be the Grand Maſter, or a Grand Warden, who has not acted as the maſter of a particular lodge.

CHARGE V.

Of the Management of the CRAFT in Working,

ALL maſons ſhould work hard and honeſtly on working days, that they may live reputably and appear in a decent and becoming manner on holidays; and likewiſe the working hours appointed by law, or confirmed by cuſtom, ſhall be obſerved.

A maſter-maſon only muſt be the ſurveyor or maſter of the work, who ſhall undertake the lord's work reaſonably, ſhall truly diſpend his goods as if they were his own, and ſhall not give more wages than juſt, to any fellow or apprentice.

THE wardens ſhall be true both to maſter and fellows, taking care of all things both within and without the lodge, eſpecially in the maſter's abſence; and their brethren ſhall obey them.

THE maſter and the maſons ſhall faithfully finiſh the lord's work, whether task or journey; nor ſhall they take the work at taſk, which hath been accuſtomed to journey.

NONE ſhall ſhow envy at a brother's proſperity; nor ſupplant him, nor put him out of his work, if capable to finiſh it.

ALL maſons ſhall meekly receive their wages without murmuring or mutiny, and not deſert the maſter till the lord's work is finiſhed; they muſt avoid ill language, calling each other brother or fellow with much courteſy, both within and without the lodge; they ſhall inſtruct a younger brother to become bright and expert, that the lord's materials may not be ſpoiled.

BUT free and accepted maſons ſhall not allow Cowans to work with them, nor ſhall they be employed by Cowans without an urgent neceſſity; and even in that caſe they muſt not teach cowans, but muſt have a ſeperate communication; no labourer ſhall be employed in the proper work of Free-Maſons.

CHARGE VI.

Concerning MASONS Behaviour.

1. Behaviour in the lodge before cloſing.

YOU muſt not hold private committees, or ſeparate converſation, without leave from the maſter; nor talk of any thing impertinent, nor interrupt the maſter or warden, or any other brother ſpeaking

ſpeaking to the chair ; nor act ludicrouſly while the lodge is engaged in what is ſerious and ſolemn; but you are to pay due reverence to the maſter, wardens, and fellows, and put them to worſhip.

EVERY brother found guilty of a fault, ſhall ſtand to the award of the lodge, unleſs he appeals to the grand lodge, or unleſs a lord's work is retarded ; for then a particular reference may be made.

No private piques, no quarrels about nations, families, religions, or politics, muſt be brought within the doors of the lodge ; for as maſons, we are of the oldeſt Catholic Religion, before hinted ; and of all nations upon the ſquare, level, and plumb ; and like our predeceſſors in all ages, we are reſolved againſt political diſputes, as contrary to the peace and welfare of the lodge.

2. Behaviour after the lodge is cloſed, and the brethren not gone.

YOU may enjoy yourſelves with innocent mirth treating one another according to ability, but avoiding all exceſs ; not forcing a brother to eat or drink beyond his own inclination (according to the old regulation of King Ahaſuerus), nor hinder him from going home when he pleaſes ; for tho' after lodge-hours you are like other men, yet the blame of your exceſs may be thrown upon the fraternity, though unjuſtly.

3. Be-

3. Behaviour at meeting without ſtrangers, but not in a formed lodge.

You are to ſalute one another as you have been, or ſhall be, inſtructed; freely communicating hints of knowledge, but without diſcloſing ſecrets, unleſs to thoſe that have given long proof of their taciturnity and honour, and without derogating from the reſpect due to any brother, were he not a maſon; for though all brothers and fellows, are upon the level, yet maſonry diveſts no man of the honour that was due to him before he was made a maſon, or that ſhall become his due afterwards; nay it rather adds to his reſpect, teaching us to give honour to whom it is due, eſpecially to a noble or eminent brother, whom we ſhould diſtinguiſh from all of his rank and ſtation, and ſerve him readily, according to our ability.

4. Behaviour in the preſence of ſtrangers, not Maſons.

You muſt be cautious in your words, carriage, and motions; ſo that the moſt penetrating ſtranger may not be able to diſcover what is not proper to be intimated: And the impertinent or enſnaring queſtions, or ignorant diſcourſe of ſtrangers, muſt be prudently managed by free-maſons.

5. Be-

5. Behaviour at home, and in your neighbourhood.

MASONS ought to be moral men, as above charged; conſequently good husbands, good parents, good ſons, and good neighbours; not ſtaying too long from home, and avoiding all exceſs; yet wiſe men too, for certain reaſons known to them.

6. Behaviour towards a foreign brother, or ſtranger.

You are cautiouſly to examine him, as prudence ſhall direct you, that you may not be impoſed on by a pretender, whom you are to reject with deriſion, and beware of giving him any hints; but if you diſcover him to be true and faithful, you are to reſpect him as a brother, and if in want you are to relieve him if you can, or elſe direct him how he may be relieved: You muſt employ him if you can, or elſe recommend him to be employed; but you are not charged to do beyond your ability.

7. Behaviour behind a brother's back, as well as before his face.

FREE and accepted maſons have ever been charged to avoid all manner of ſlandering and backbiting of true and faithful brethren, or talking diſreſpectfully of a brother's performance or perſon ſon, and all malice or unjuſt reſentment; nay, you muſt not ſuffer any others to reproach an honeſt brother, but defend his character as far as is conſiſtent with honour, ſafety and prudence; tho' no further.

CHARGE VII.

Concerning LAW-SUITS.

IF a brother do you injury, apply firſt to your own or his lodge, and if you are not ſatisfied you may appeal to the Grand Lodge; but you muſt never take a legal courſe, till the cauſe cannot be otherwiſe decided; for if the affair is only between maſons, and about maſonry, law-ſuits ought to be prevented by the good advice of prudent brethren, who are the beſt referees of differences.

But if that reference is either impracticable or unſucceſsful, and the affair muſt be brought into the courts of law or equity; yet ſtill you muſt avoid all wrath, malice, and rancour in carrying on the ſuit; not ſaying or doing any thing that may hinder the continuance or renewal of brotherly love and friendſhip, which is the glory and cement of this ancient Fraternity; that we may ſhew to all the world the benign influence of maſonry, as all wiſe, true, and faithful brethren have done from the beginning of time, and will do till Architecture ſhall be diſſolved in the general conflagration. Amen! So mote it be!

 All theſe charges you are to obſerve, and alſo thoſe that ſhall be given to you in a way that cannot be written.

A

SHORT CHARGE

To a new admitted

MASON.

BROTHER,

YOU are now admitted (by the unanimous conſent of our lodge) a fellow of our moſt ancient and honourable ſociety; ancient, as having ſubſiſted from time immemorial; and honourable, as tending in every particular, to render a man ſo who will be but conformable to its glorious Precepts: The greateſt monarchs in all ages, as well of Aſia and Africa as of Europe, have been encouragers of the Royal Art; and many of them have preſided as GRAND MASTERS over the maſons in their reſpective Territories, not thinking it any leſſening to their imperial dignities, to level themſelves with their brethren in Maſonry, and to act as they did.

THE world's great architect is our Supreme Maſter; and the Unerring Rule he has given us, is

is that by which we work; religious diſputes are never ſuffered within the lodge, for as Maſons we only purſue the univerſal religion, or the religion of nature; this is the center which unites the moſt different principles in one ſacred band, and brings together thoſe who were the moſt diſtant from one another.

THERE are three general heads of duty which Maſons ought always to inculcate, viz. to GOD, our neighbour, and ourſelves; to GOD, in never mentioning his NAME but with that reverential awe which a creature ought to bear to his CREATOR, and to look upon him always as the Summum Bonum which we came into the world to enjoy, and according to that view to regulate all our purſuits: to our neighbours, in acting upon the ſquare, or doing as we would be done by; to ourſelves, in avoiding all intemperance and exceſſes, whereby we may be rendered incapable of following our work, or led into behaviour unbecoming our laudable profeſſion, and always keeping within due bounds and free from all pollution.

IN the ſtate, a Maſon is to behave as a peaceable and dutiful ſubject, conforming chearfully to the government under which he lives.

HE is to to pay a due deference to his ſuperiors; and from his inferiors he is rather to receive honour, with ſome reluctance, than to extort it: He is to be a man of benevolence and charity, not ſit-ting down contented while his fellow creatures (but much more his brethren) are in want, when it is in his power (without prejudicing himſelf or family) to relieve them.

In the lodge he is to behave with all due decorum, leaſt the beauty and harmony thereof ſhould be diſturbed or broke: He is to be obedient to the Master and the preſiding officers, and to apply himſelf cloſely to the buſineſs of maſonry, that he may the ſooner become a proficient therein, both for his own credit and for that of the lodge.

He is not to neglect his own neceſſary Avocations* for the ſake of Maſonry, nor to involve himſelf in quarrels with thoſe who through ignorance may ſpeak evil of or ridicule it.

He is to be a lover of the Arts and Sciences, and is to take all Opportunities to improve himſelf therein.

If he recommends a friend to be made a Maſon, he muſt vouch him to be ſuch as he really believes will conform to the aforeſaid duties, leaſt by his miſconduct at any time, the lodge ſhould paſs under ſome evil imputations.

Nothing

* Here you are to underſtand that a Maſon ought not to belong to a number of lodges at one time, nor run from lodge to lodge; or otherwiſe, after Maſons or Maſonry, whereby his buſineſs or family may be neglected; but yet every Maſon is ſubject to all the bye-laws of his lodge, which he is ſtrictly and conſtantly to obey;—for the attendance and dues of one lodge, can never prejudice neither him nor his family.

NOTHING can prove more ſhocking to all faithful Maſons, then to ſee any of their brethren profane or break through the ſacred Rules of their order; and ſuch as can do it, they wiſh had never been admitted.

THE

THE ANCIENT MANNER OF Conſtituting a LODGE.

A New lodge, for avoiding many irregularities, ſhould be ſolemnly conſtituted by the Grand-Maſter, with his deputy and wardens; or, in the Grand-Maſter's abſence, the deputy acts for his worſhip, the ſenior grand-warden as deputy, the junior grand-warden as the ſenior, and the preſent maſter of a lodge as the junior: Or if the deputy is alſo abſent, the grand-maſter may depute either of his grand-wardens, who can appoint others to act as grand-wardens, pro tempore.

THE lodge being opened, and the candidates or new maſter and wardens being yet among the fellow-crafts, the grand-maſter ſhall ask his deputy if he has examined them, and whether he finds the maſter well ſkilled in the noble ſcience and the royal

royal art, and duly inſtructed in our myſteries, &c. the deputy anſwering in the affirmative, ſhall (by the grand-maſter's order) take the candidate from among his fellows, and preſent him to the grand-maſter, ſaying, Right Worſhipful Grand Maſter, the brethren here, deſire to be formed into a regular lodge; and I preſent my worthy brother A. B. to be (inſtalled) their maſter, whom I know to be of good morals and great skill, true and truſty, and a lover of the whole fraternity, whereſoever diſperſed over the face of the earth.

THEN the grand maſter placing the candidate on his left hand, and having aſked and obtained the unanimous conſent of the brethren, ſhall ſay (after ſome other ceremonies and expreſſions that cannot be written) I conſtitute and form theſe good brethren into a new regular lodge, and appoint you, brother A. B. the maſter of it, not doubting of your capacity and care to preſerve the cement of the lodge, &c.

UPON this the deputy, or ſome other brother for him, ſhall rehearſe the charge of a maſter; and the grand maſter ſhall ask the candidate, ſaying, Do you ſubmit to theſe charges as maſters have done in all ages? And the new maſter ſignifying his cordial ſubmiſſion thereto, the grand-maſter ſhall by certain ſignificant ceremonies and ancient uſages, inſtall him and preſent him with his warrant, the book of conſtitutions, the lodge-book, and

inſtruments of his office, one after another; and after each of them the grand-maſter, his deputy, or ſome brother for him, ſhall rehearſe the ſhort and pithy charge that is ſuitable to the thing preſent.

NEXT, the members of this new lodge, bowing altogether to the grand-maſter, ſhall return his worſhip their thanks (according to the cuſtom of maſters) and ſhall immediately do homage to their new maſter, and (as faithful craftsmen) ſignify their promiſe of ſubjection and obedience to him by uſual congratulations.

THE deputy and grand wardens, and any other brethren that are not members of this new lodge, ſhall next congratulate the new maſter, and he ſhall return his becoming acknowledgments (as maſter-maſons) firſt to the grand-maſter and grand officers, and to the reſt in their order.

THEN the grand-maſter orders the new maſter to enter immediately upon the exerciſe of his office, and, calling forth his ſenior warden, a fellow-craft (maſter-maſon) preſents him to the grand-maſter for his worſhip's approbation, and to the new lodge for their conſent; upon which the ſenior or junior grand-warden, or ſome brother for him, ſhall rehearſe the charge of a warden, &c. of a private lodge; and he, ſignifying his cordial ſubmiſſion thereto, the new maſter ſhall preſent him ſingly with the ſeveral inſtruments of his office, and, in ancient ancient manner and due form, inſtal him in his proper place.

In like Manner the new maſter ſhall call forth his junior warden, who ſhall be a maſter-maſon, and preſented (as above) to the junior grand-warden, or ſome other brother in his ſtead, and ſhall in the above manner be inſtalled in his proper Place; and the brethren of this new lodge ſhall ſignify their obedience to theſe new wardens, by the uſual congratulations due to wardens.

The Grand-Maſter then gives all the brethren joy of their maſter and wardens, &c. and recommends harmony, &c. hoping their only contention, will be a laudable emulation in cultivating the royal art, and the ſocial virtues.

Then the grand-ſecretary, or ſome brother for him, (by the grand-maſter's order) in the name of the grand-lodge, declares and proclaims this new lodge duly conſtituted No. , &c.

Upon which all the new lodge together (after the cuſtom of maſters) return their hearty and ſincere thanks for the honour of this conſtitution.

The grand-maſter alſo orders the grand-ſecretary to regiſter this new lodge in the grand lodge-book, and to notify the ſame to the other particular lodges; and, after ſome other ancient cuſtoms and demonſtrations of joy and ſatisfaction, he orders the ſenior grand-warden to cloſe the lodge.

A PRAYER said at the Opening of the Lodge, or making a new Brother, &c. used by Jewish Free-Masons.

O LORD, excellent art thou in thy truth, and there is nothing great in comparison to thee; for thine is the praise, from all the works of thy hands, for evermore.

ENLIGHTEN us, we beseech thee, in the true knowledge of masonry: By the sorrows of Adam, thy first made man; by the blood of Abel, thy holy one; by the righteousness of Seth, in whom thou art well pleased; and by thy covenant with Noah, in whose architecture thou was't pleased to save the seed of thy beloved; number us not among those that know not thy statutes, nor the divine mysteries of the secret Cabala.

BUT grant, we beseech thee, that the ruler of this lodge may be endued with knowledge and wisdom, to instruct us and explain his secret mysteries

* IN the preface to the Mishna, we find this tradition of the Jews, explained as follows:

GOD not only delivered the law to Moses on Mount Sinai, but the explanation of it likewise: When Moses came down from ries, as our holy brother Moſes * did (in his lodge) to Aaron, to Eleazar and Ithamar, (the ſons of Aaron, and the ſeventy elders of Iſrael.

AND grant that we may underſtand, learn, and keep all the Statutes and commandments of the Lord, and this holy myſtery, pure and undefiled unto our lives end. Amen, Lord.

from the mount, and entered into his tent, Aaron went to viſit him; and Moſes acquainted Aaron with the laws he had received from GOD, together with the explanation of them: After this Aaron placed himſelf at the right-hand of Moſes, and Eleazar and Ithamar (the ſons of Aaron) were admitted, to whom Moſes repeated what he had juſt before told to Aaron: Theſe being ſeated, the one on the right-hand, the other on the left-hand of Moſes; the ſeventy elders of Iſrael, who compoſed the Sanhedrim, came in; and Moſes again declared the ſame laws to them, with the interpretations of them, as he had done before to Aaron and his ſons. Laſtly, all who pleaſed of the common people were invited to enter, and Moſes inſtructed them likewiſe in the ſame manner as the reſt: So that Aaron heard four times what Moſes had been taught by GOD upon Mount Sinai, Eleazar and Ithamar three times, the ſeventy elders twice, and the people once. Moſes afterwards reduced the laws which he had received into writing, but not the explanations of them; theſe he thought it ſufficient to truſt to the memories of the abovementioned perſons, who, being perfectly inſtructed in them, delivered them to their children, and theſe again to theirs from age to age.

A PRAYER used amongst the primitive Christian MASONS.

THE might of the Father of heaven, and the wisdom of his glorious Son, through the grace and goodness of the Holy Ghost, being three persons in one Godhead, be with us at our beginning, and give us grace so to govern us here in our living, that we may come to his bliss that never shall have end. Amen.

Another Prayer, and that which is most general at Making or Opening.

MOST holy and glorious Lord God, thou great architect of heaven and earth, who art the giver of all good gifts and graces, and hast promised that where two or three are gathered together in thy Name, thou wilt be in the midst of them: In thy Name we assemble and meet together, most humbly beseeching thee to bless us in all our undertakings; that we may know and serve thee aright, that all our doings may tend to thy glory and the salvation of our souls.

AND

AND we beſeech thee, O Lord God, to bleſs this our preſent undertaking, and grant that this our new brother may dedicate his life to thy ſervice, and be a true and faithful brother among us: Endue him with a competency of thy divine wiſdom, that he may, with the ſecrets of free-maſonry, be able to unfold the myſteries of godlineſs and Chriſtianity. This we moſt humbly beg, in the Name, and for the ſake, of JESUS CHRIST our Lord and Saviour. Amen.

*AHABATH OLAM.

A Prayer repeated in the Royal Arch Lodge at Jeruſalem.

THOU haſt loved us, O Lord our God, with eternal Love; thou haſt ſpared us with great and exceeding patience, our Father and our King, for thy great NAME's ſake, and for our Father's ſake who truſted in thee, to whom thou didſt teach the ſtatutes of life, that they might do after the ſtatutes of thy good pleaſure with a perfect heart: So be thou merciful unto us, O our Father, merciful Father, that ſheweth mercy, have mercy upon us we beſeech thee, and put underſtanding into our hearts, that we may underſtand, be wiſe, hear, learn, learn, teach, keep, do, and perform all the words of the doctrine of thy law in love, and enlighten our eyes in thy commandments, and cauſe our hearts to cleave to thy law, and unite them in the love and fear of thy NAME; we will not be aſhamed, nor confounded, nor ſtumble, for ever and ever.

BECAUSE we have truſted in thy HOLY, GREAT MIGHTY and TERRIBLE NAME, we will rejoice and be glad in thy ſalvation, and in thy mercies, O lord our God; and the multitude of thy mercies, ſhall not forſake us for ever: Selah. And now make haſte and bring upon us a bleſſing, and peace from the four corners of the earth: for thou art a God that workeſt ſalvation, and has choſen us out of every people and language; and thou, our king, has cauſed us to cleave to thy GREAT NAME, in love to praiſe thee and to be united to thee, and to love thy name: bleſſed art thou, O Lord God, who haſt choſen thy People Iſrael in love.

HAVING inſerted this prayer, and mentioned that part of Maſonry commonly called the Royal Arch (which I firmly believe to be the root, heart, and marrow of maſonry) I cannot forbear giving a hint of a certain evil deſigner, who has made a trade thereof for ſome time paſt, and has drawn drawn in a number of worthy, honeſt men, and made them believe that he and his aſſiſtants truly taught them all and every part of the abovementioned branch of maſonry, which they ſoon communicated to the worthy brethren of their acquaintance, without being able to form any ſort of judgment whereby they might diſtinguiſh truth from falſhood, and conſequently could not diſcern the impoſition; but, as the wiſe Seneca juſtly obſerves, it fares with us in human life as in a routed army, one ſtumbles firſt and then another falls upon him; and ſo they follow, one upon the neck of another, till the whole field comes to be but one heap of miſcarriages. This is the caſe of all thoſe who think themſelves Royal Arch Maſons, without paſſing the chair in regular form, according to the ancient cuſtom of the craft: To this I will add the opinion of our worſhipful brother Doctor Fifield D'Aſſigney, printed in the Year 1744. "Some "of the fraternity (ſays he) have expreſſed an un- "eaſineſs at this matter being kept a ſecret from "them (ſince they had already paſſed through the "uſual degrees of probation) I cannot help being "of opinion, that they have no right to any ſuch "benefit until they make a proper application, "and are received with due formality: And as it is "an organized body of men who have paſſed the "chair, and given undeniable proofs of their ſkill "in architecture, it cannot be treated with too "much

" much reverence; and more eſpecially ſince the " characters of the preſent members of that parti- " cular lodge are untainted, and their behaviour " judicious and unexceptionable: So that there " cannot be the leaſt hinge to hang a Doubt on, " but that they are moſt excellent maſons."

THE reſpect I have for the very name of free-maſon, is ſufficient to make me conceal the name of the perſon here pointed at; and, inſtead of expoſing him, or ſtigmatizing him with a name he juſtly deſerves, I earneſtly wiſh that GOD may guide him back, out of his preſent labyrinth of darkneſs, to the true light of maſonry; which is, truth, charity, and juſtice.

I make no manner of doubt, but that this will reach the hands of the perſon aimed at; and as my intention is rather to reform than offend, I hope he will anſwer my expectation, in laying aſide ſuch evils as may bring diſhonour to the craft and himſelf; and I aſſure him (upon the honour of a maſon) I have no evil deſign againſt him, no more than Heſiod had againſt his brother Perſes, when he wrote the following advice.

O Perſes, fooliſh Perſes, bow thine ear,
To the good counſels of a ſoul ſincere;
To wickedneſs the road is quickly found,
Short is the way and on an eaſy ground;

The paths of virtue muſt be reach'd by toil,
Arduous and long and on a rugged ſoil;
Thorny the gate, but when the top you gain,
Fair is the future and the proſpect plain:
Far does the man all other men excel,
Who from his wiſdom thinks in all things well;
Wiſely conſidering to himſelf a Friend,
All for the preſent beſt and for the end:
Nor is the man without his ſhare of praiſe,
Who well the dictates of the wiſe obeys;
But he that is not wiſe himſelf, nor can
Hearken to wiſdom, is a uſeleſs man.

Therefore, in caſe of the abſence of all grand-maſters and deputies, the preſent ſenior grand-warden fills the chair; and in his abſence, the junior grand-warden; and in his abſence, the oldeſt former grand-warden in company; and if no former grand officer

NEW REGULATIONS.

XXVIII. 1. That no Brothers be admitted into the grand lodge, but the immediate members thereof, viz. the four preſent and all former grand officers, the treaſurer and ſecretary, the maſters and wardens of all regular lodges, except a brother who is a petitioner, or a witneſs in ſome caſe, or one called in by motion.

2. That at the third ſtroke of the grand maſter's gavel, there ſhall be a general ſilence; and that he he who breaks ſilence; without leave from the chair, ſhall be publicly repremanded.

3. That under the ſame penalty every brother ſhall keep his ſeat, and keep ſtrict ſilence whenever the grand maſter and deputy ſhall think fit to riſe from the chair, and call To order.

4. That in the grand lodge every member ſhall keep in his ſeat (according to the number of his lodge) and not move about from place to place during the communication, except the grand wardens, as having more immediately the care of the grand lodge.

5. That no Brother is to ſpeak but once to the ſame affair, unleſs to explain himſelf, or when called upon by the chair to ſpeak.

6. Every one, that ſpeaks ſhall riſe, and keep ſtanding, addreſſing himſelf in a proper manner to the chair; nor ſhall any preſume to interrupt him, under the aforeſaid penalty; unleſs the grand maſter find him wandering from the point in hand, ſhall think fit to reduce him to order; for then the ſaid ſpeaker ſhall ſit down: But, after he has been ſet right, he may again proceed if he pleaſes.

7. If in the grand lodge any member is twice called to order at any one aſſembly, for trangreſſing theſe rules, and is guilty of a third offence of the ſame nature, the chair ſhall peremptorily order him to quit the lodge-room for that night.

8. That whoever ſhall be ſo rude as to hiſs at any brother, or at what another ſays or has ſaid, he ſhall be forthwith ſolemnly excluded the communication, and declared incapable of ever being a member of any grand lodge for the future, till another time he publicly owns his fault, and his grace be granted.

9. No Motion for a new regulation, or for the continuance or alteration of an old one, ſhall be made 'till it be firſt handed up in writing to the chair; and, after it has been peruſed by the grand maſter, at leaſt about ten minutes, the thing may be moved publickly, and then it ſhall be audibly read by the ſecretary; and if he be ſeconded, and thirded, it muſt immediately be committed to the conſideration of the whole aſſembly, that their ſenſe may be fully heard about it; after which the queſtion ſhall be put, pro and con.

10. The opinion, or votes of the members are to be ſignified by holding up of hands; that is, one hand each member; which uplifted Hands the grand wardens are to count, unleſs the number of hands be ſo unequal as to render the counting them uſeleſs.

Nor ſhould any other kind of diviſion ever be admitted among free-maſons.

In order to preſerve harmony, it was thought neceſſary to uſe counters and a balloting box when Occaſion requires.

Though the foregoing are called new regulations, yet they are of many years ſtanding, and have been wrote at different times, by order of the whole community, as amendments or explanations of the old regulations; for we are not to break in upon the ancient rules of the fraternity, as before mentioned in New Regulation XXVII.

As my chief aim and deſign in this undertaking is to acquaint my worthy brethren with the old and new regulations (and in truth they are the moſt requiſite ſubject concerning free-maſonry that can be committed to writing) I have added the following regulations of the committee for charity, as they have been approved of and practiſed by the Grand Lodge of Ireland ſince the Year 1738.

In the old book of conſtitutions the maſter's ſong was of too great a length to be ſung at one time, therefore the brethren never ſing more than the following verſe and Chorus.

I. The Grand Maſter's Song.

THUS mighty Eaſtern kings, and ſome
Of Abram's race, and monarchs good
Of Egypt, Syria, Greece and Rome,
True ARCHITECTURE underſtood;

No wonder then if maſons join,
To celebrate thoſe maſon kings ;
With ſolemn note and flowing wine,
Whilſt e'ery brother jointly ſings.

CHORUS.

Who can unfold the Royal Art,
Or ſhew its ſecrets in a ſong ;
They're ſafely kept in maſon's heart,
And to the ancient lodge belong.

To the King and the Craft, as Maſter-Maſons.

In the old book this Song was thought too long, therefore the following laſt verſe and chorus is thought ſufficient.

II. The Wardens Song.

From hence forth ever ſing,
The Craftſman and the king,
With poetry and muſick ſweet,
Reſound their harmony compleat ;
And with geometry in ſkilful hand,
Due homage pay,
Without delay,
To the king and to our maſter grand ;
He rules the free-born ſons of art,
By love and friendſhip, hand and heart.

CHORUS.

CHORUS.

Who can rehearſe the praiſe,
In ſoft poetic lays;
Or ſolid proſe of maſons true,
Whoſe art tranſcends the common view;
Their ſecrets ne'er to ſtrangers yet expos'd,
Reſerv'd ſhall be,
By Maſons free,
And only to the ancient lodge diſclos'd;
Becauſe they're kept in maſon's heart,
By brethren of the royal art.

To all the kings, princes and potentates, that ever propagated the royal excellent Art.

III. The Fellow-Craft's Song.

I.

Hail maſonry! thou craft divine!
Glory of earth, from heav'n reveal'd!
Which doth with jewels precious ſhine,
From all but maſons eyes conceal'd.
Chor. Thy praiſes due who can rehearſe,
In nervous proſe or flowing verſe.

II.

As men from brutes diſtinguiſh'd are,
A maſon other men excels;
For what's in knowledge choice and rare,
Within his breaſt ſecurely dwells.
Chor. His ſilent breaſt and faithful heart,
Preſerve the ſecrets of the art.

From

II.

From ſcorching heat and piercing cold,
From beaſts whoſe roar the foreſt rends;
From the aſſaults of warriors bold,
The maſons art mankind defends.

Chor. Be to this Art due honour paid,
From which mankind receives ſuch aid.

IV.

Enſigns of ſtate that feed our pride,
Diſtinctions troublefome and vain;
By maſons true are laid aſide,
Art's free-born ſons ſuch toys diſdain.

Chor. Innobl'd by the name they bear,
Diſtinguiſh'd by the badge they wear.

V.

Sweet Fellowſhip from envy free,
Friendly converſe of brotherhood;
The lodge's laſting cement be,
Which has for Ages firmly ſtood.

Chor. A lodge thus built, for ages paſt
Has laſted, and ſhall ever laſt.

VI.

Then in our ſongs be juſtice done,
To thoſe who have inrich'd the art;
From Adam down until this time,
And let each brother bear a part.

Chor. Let noble maſons healths go round,
Their Praiſe in lofty lodge reſound.

To his Imperial Majeſty (our Brother) FRANCIS,
Emperor of Germany.

IV. The Enter'd 'Prentices Song.

I.

Come let us prepare,
We brothers that are,
Aſſembled on merry occaſion;
Let's drink, laugh and ſing,
Our wine has a ſpring,
Here's a health to an accepted maſon.

II.

The world is in pain,
Our ſecrets to gain,
And ſtill let them wonder and gaze on;
Till they're brought to the light,
They'll ne'er know the right
Word or ſign of an accepted maſon.

IV.

'Tis this and 'tis that,
They cannot tell what,
Why ſo many great men of the nation,
Should aprons put on,
To make themſelves one,
With a free and an accepted maſon.

IV.

Great kings, dukes and lords,
Have laid by their ſwords,
Our myſt'ry to put a good grace on;
And thought themſelves fam'd,
To hear themſelves nam'd,
With a free and an accepted maſon.

V.

Antiquity's pride,
We have on our ſide,
Which maketh men juſt, in their ſtation;
There's nought but what's good,
To be underſtood,
By a free and an accepted maſon.

VI.

We're true and ſincere,
And juſt to the fair,
They'll truſt us on any occaſion;
No mortal can more,
The ladies adore,
Than a free and an accepted maſon.

VII.

Then join hand in hand,
By each brother firm ſtand,
Let's be merry and put a bright face on:
What mortal can boaſt,
So noble a toaſt,
As a free and an accepted maſon.

[Thrice repeated in due form.]

To all the Fraternity round the Globe.

V. The

V. The Deputy Grand-Maſter's Song.

N. B. The two laſt Lines of each Verſe is the Chorus.

I.

On on my dear Brethren, purſue your great Lecture,
And refine on the Rules of old Architecture;
High Honour to Maſons the Craft daily brings,
To thoſe Brothers of Princes and Fellows of Kings.

II.

We've drove the rude Vandals and Goths off the Stage,
Reviving the Arts of Auguſtus fam'd Age;
Veſpaſian deſtroy'd the vaſt Temple in vain,
Since ſo many now riſe in Great George's mild Reign.

III.

Of Wren and of Angelo, mark the great Names,
Immortal they live as the Tiber and Thames;
To Heav'n and themſelves they've ſuch Monuments rais'd,
Recorded like Saints and like Saints they are prais'd.

IV.

The five noble Orders compos'd with ſuch Art,
Will amaze the fix'd Eye and engage the whole Heart;
Proportion's dumb Harmony gracing the whole,
Gives our Work, like the glorious Creation, a Soul.

V.

Then Maſter and Brethren preſerve your great Name,
This Lodge ſo majeſtic will purchaſe you Fame;
Rever'd it ſhall ſtand till all Nature expire,
And its Glories ne'er fade till the World is on Fire.

VI.

See, ſee, behold here what rewards all our Toil,
Enlivens our Genius and bids Labour ſmile;
To our noble Grand-Maſter let a Bumper be crown'd,
To all Maſons a Bumper, ſo let it go round.

VII.

Again my lov'd Brethren, again let it paſs,
Our antient firm Union cements with the Glaſs;
And all the Contentions 'mongſt Maſons ſhall be,
Who better can work or who beſt can agree.

To the Right Worſhipful the Grand-Maſter.

VI. Grand-Warden's Song.

I.

Let Maſonry be now my Theme,
Throughout the Globe to ſpread its Fame,
And eternize each worthy Brother's Name;
Your Praiſe ſhall to the Skies reſound,
In laſting Happineſs abound,
And with ſweetUnion all your nobleDeeds be crown'd.

[Repeat this laſt Line]

CHORUS.

Sing then my Muſe to Maſon's Glory,
Your Names are ſo rever'd in Story
That all th' admiring World do now adore ye.

II.

Let Harmony divine inſpire
Your Souls with Love and gen'rous Fire,
To copy well wiſe Solomon your Sire;

Know-

Knowledge ſublime ſhall fill each heart,
The Rules of G'ometry to impart,
While Wiſdom, Strength, and Beauty, crown the royal Art.

Chorus. Sing then my Muſe, &c.

III.

Let antient Maſons Healths go round,
In ſwelling Cups all Cares be drown'd,
And Hearts united 'mongſt the Craft be found;
May everlaſting Scenes of Joy,
Our peaceful Hours of Bliſs employ,
Which Time's all-conqu'ring Hand ſhall ne'er deſtroy.

Chorus. Sing then my Muſe, &c.

IV.

My Brethren thus all Cares reſign,
Your Hearts let glow with Thoughts divine,
And Veneration ſhow to Solomon's Shrine;
Our annual Tribute thus we'll pay,
That late Poſterity ſhall ſay,
We've crown'd with Joy this happy, happy Day.

Chorus. Sing then my Muſe, &c.

To all the Noble Lords, and Right Worſhipful Brethren, that have been Grand-Maſters.

VII. The Treaſurer's Song.

Tune.] Near ſome cool ſhade.

I.

Grant me kind Heav'n what I requeſt,
In Maſonry let me be bleſt;
Direct me to that happy Place,
Where Friendſhip ſmiles in every Face;

Where Freedom and ſweet Innocence,
Enlarge the Mind and cheers the Senſe.

II.

Where ſcepter'd Reaſon from her Throne,
Surveys the Lodge and makes us one;
And Harmony's delightful Sway,
For ever ſheds ambroſial Day;
Where we bleſt Eden's Pleaſures taſte,
While balmy Joys are our Repaſt.

III.

Our Lodge the ſocial Virtues grace,
And Wiſdom's Rules we fondly trace;
Whole Nature open to our View,
Points out the Paths we ſhould purſue;
Let us ſubſiſt in laſting Peace,
And may our Happineſs increaſe.

IV.

No prying Eye can view us here,
No Fool or Knave diſturb our Cheer;
Our well-form'd Laws ſet Mankind free,
And give Relief to Miſery;
The Poor, oppreſs'd with Woe and Grief,
Gain, from our bounteous Hands, Relief.

To all well diſpoſed charitable Maſons.

VIII. The Secretary's Song.

I.

Ye Brethren of the antient Craft,
Ye fav'rite Sons of Fame;
Let Bumpers cheerfully be quaff'd,
To each good Maſon's Name;

Happy,

Happy, long happy may he be,
Who loves and honours Maſonry;
With a fa, la, la, &c.

II.

In vain wou'd D'Anvers with his Wit,*
Our ſlow Reſentment raiſe;
What he and all Mankind have writ,
But celebrates our Praiſe;
His Wit this only Truth imparts,
That Maſons have firm faithful Hearts;
With a fa, la, la, &c.

III.

Ye Britiſh Fair, for Beauty fam'd,
Your Slaves we wiſh to be;
Let none for Charms like yours be nam'd,
That loves not Maſonry;
This Maxim D'Anvers proves full well,
That Maſons never kiſs and tell;
With a fa, la, la, &c.

IV.

Free-Maſons! no Offences give,
Let Fame your Worth declare;
Within your Compaſs wiſely live,
And act upon the Square;
May Peace and Friendſhip e'er abound,
And every Maſon's Health go round;
With a fa, la, la, &c.

IX. Song

To the Deputy Grand-Maſter.

* That thoſe who hang'd Captain Porteous, at Edinburgh, were all Free-Maſons, becauſe they kept their own Secrets. See the Craftſman of the 16th of April, Number 563.

A choice COLLECTION of

IX. Song to the foregoing Tune.

I.

On you who Maſonry deſpiſe,
This Counſel I beſtow ;
Don't ridicule, if you are wiſe,
A Secret you don't know :
Yourſelves you banter, but not it ;
You ſhow your Spleen, but not your Wit ;
With a fa, la, la, &c.

II.

Inſpiring Virtue by our Rules,
And in ourſelves ſecure ;
We have Compaſſion for thoſe Fools,
Who think our Acts impure :
We know from Ignorance proceeds,
Such mean Opinion of our Deeds ;
With a fa, la, la, &c.

III.

If union and ſincerity,
Have a pretence to pleaſe ;
We brothers of free-Maſonry,
Lay, juſtly, claim to theſe :
To State-Diſputes we ne'er give birth,
Our motto, Friendſhip is and mirth ;
With a fa, la, la, &c.

IV.

Some of our Rules I will impart,
But muſt conceal the reſt ;
They're ſafely lodged in maſon's hearts,
Within each honeſt breaſt :

We

We love our country and our king;
We toaſt the ladies, laugh and ſing;
With a fa, la, la, &c.

To the Worſhipful grand wardens.

X. SONG.

I.

By maſon's art th' aſpiring domes,
In ſtately columns ſhall arife;
All climates are their native homes,
Their well-judg'd actions reach the skies;
Heroes and kings revere their name,
While poets ſing their laſting fame.

II.

Great, noble, gen'rous, good and brave,
Are titles they moſt juſtly claim;
Their deeds ſhall live beyond the grave,
Which thoſe unborn ſhall loud proclaim;
Time ſhall their glorious acts enroll,
While love and friendſhip charm the ſoul.

To the perpetual Honour of Free-Maſons.

XI. SONG.

I.

As I at Wheeler's lodge one night,
Kept Bacchus company;
For Bacchus is a maſon bright,
And of all lodges free.

Said

II.

Said I great Bacchus is a-dry,
Pray give the god ſome wine;
Jove in a fury did reply,
October's as divine.

III.

It makes us maſons more compleat,
Adds to our fancy wings;
Makes us as happy and as great,
As mighty lords and kings.

To the maſters and wardens of all regular lodges.

XII. SONG.

I.

Some folks have with curious impertinence ſtrove,
From free-maſons boſoms their ſecrets to move,
I'll tell them in vain their endeavours muſt prove,
Which nobody can deny, &c.

II.

Of that happy ſecret when we are poſſeſs'd,
Our tongues can't explain what is lodg'd in our breaſts,
For the bleſſing's ſo great it can ne'er be expreſs'd.
Which nobody can deny, &c.

III.

By friendſhip's ſtrict ties we brothers are join'd,
With mirth in each heart and content in each mind,
And this is a difficult ſecret to find.
Which nobody can deny, &c.

But

IV.

But you who would fain our grand ſecret expoſe,
One thing beſt conceal'd to the world you diſcloſe,
Much folly in blaming what none of you knows.
Which nobody can deny, &c.

V.

Truth, charity, juſtice, our principles are,
What one doth poſſeſs the other may ſhare,
All theſe in the world are ſecrets moſt rare,
Which nobody can deny, &c.

VI.

While then we are met the world's wonder and boaſt,
And all do enjoy what pleaſes each moſt,
I'll give you the beſt and moſt glorious toaſt.
Which nobody can deny, &c.

VII.

Here's a health to the gen'rous, brave and the good,
To all thoſe who think and who act as they ſhould,
In all this the free-maſon's health's underſtood.
Which nobody can deny, &c.

To all true and faithful brethren, &c.

XIII SONG.

Tune, Oh Polly you might have toy'd and kiſs'd.

I.

You people who laugh at maſons draw near,
Give ear to my ſong without any ſneer;
And if you'll have patience you ſoon ſhall ſee,
What a noble art is maſonry.

II.

There's none but an Atheiſt can ever deny,
But that this great art came firſt from on high;
The almighty GOD here I'll prove for to be,
The firſt great maſter of maſonry.

III.

He took up his compaſs with maſterly hand,
He ſtretch'd out his rule and he meaſur'd the land;
He laid the foundation o'th' earth and the ſea,
By his known rules of maſonry.

IV.

Our firſt father Adam, deny it who can,
A maſon was made as ſoon as a man;
And a fig-leaf apron at firſt wore he,
In token of his love to maſonry.

V.

The principal law our lodge does approve,
Is that we ſhou'd live in brotherly-love;
Thus Cain was baniſh'd by heav'ns decree,
For breaking the rules of maſonry.

VI.

The temple that wiſe king Solomon rais'd,
For beauty, for order, for elegance prais'd;
To what did it owe its elegancy?
To the juſt form'd rules of maſonry.

VII.

But ſhou'd I pretend in this humble verſe,
The merits of free-maſons arts to rehearſe;
Years yet to come too little wou'd be,
To ſing all the praiſes of maſonry.

Then

VIII.

Then hoping I've not detain'd you too long,
I here ſhall take leave to finiſh my ſong;
Health to the maſter and thoſe that are free,
That live to the rules of maſonry.

To all the free-born ſons of the antient and honourable CRAFT.

XIV. SONG.

I.

We have no idle prating,
Of either whig or tory;
But each agrees,
To live at eaſe,
And ſing or tell a ſtory.

CHORUS.

Fill to him,
To the brim,
Let it round the table rowl;
The divine,
Tells you wine,
Cheers the body and the ſoul.

II.

We're always men of pleaſure,
Deſpiſing pride and party;
While knaves and fools,
Preſcribe us rules,
We are ſincere and hearty.
Chor. Fill to him, &c.

III.

If an accepted maſon,
Shou'd talk of high or low church;
We'll ſet him down,
A ſhallow crown,
And underſtand him no church.
Chor. Fill to him, &c.

IV.

The world is all in darkneſs,
About us they conjecture;
But little think,
A ſong and drink,
Succeeds the maſons lecture.
Chor. Fill to him, &c.

V.

Then landlord bring a hogſhead,
And in a corner place it;
Till it rebound,
With hollow ſound,
Each maſon here will face it.
Chor. Fill to him, &c.

To the memory of him who firſt planted a vine.

XV. SONG.

Tune. Young Damon once the happy ſwain.

I.

A maſon's daughter fair and young,
The pride of all the virgin throng,
Thus to her lover ſaid;
Tho' Damon I your flame approve,
Your actions praiſe, your perſon love,
Yet ſtill I'll live a maid.

None

II.

None ſhall untie my virgin zone,
But one to whom the ſecret's known,
Of fam'd free-maſonry;
In which the great and good combine,
To raiſe with generous deſign,
Man to felicity.

III.

The lodge excludes the fop and fool;
The plodding knave and party-tool,
That liberty wou'd fell;
The noble, faithful, and the brave,
No golden charms can e'er deceive,
In ſlavery to dwell.

IV.

This ſaid he bow'd and went away,
Apply'd was made without delay,
Return'd to her again;
The fair-one granted his requeſt,
Connubial joys their days have bleſt,
And may they e'er remain.

To maſons and to maſons bairns,
And women with both wit and charms,
That love to lie in maſon's arms.

XVI. SONG.

I.

A health to our ſiſters let us drink;
For why ſhou'd not they,
Be remember'd I pray,
When of us they ſo often do think,
When of us they ſo often do think.

'Tis

II.

'Tis they give the chiefeſt delight;
Tho' wine cheers the mind,
And maſonry's kind,
Theſe keep us in tranſport all night,
Theſe keep us in tranſport all night.

To all the female friends of free-maſons.

XVII. SONG.

Tune. The merry ton'd horn.

I.

Sing to the honour of thoſe,
Who baſeneſs and error oppoſe;
Who from ſages and magi of old,
Have got ſecrets which none can unfold;
Whilſt thro' life's ſwift career,
With mirth and good cheer,
We're revelling,
And levelling
The monarch, till he Says our joys far tranſcend
What on thrones do attend,
And thinks it a glory, like us, to be free

II.

The wiſeſt of kings pav'd the way,
And his precepts we keep to this day;
The moſt glorious of temples gave name
To free-maſons, who ſtill keep the ſame;
Tho' no prince did ariſe,
So great and ſo wiſe;

Yet in falling,
Our calling
Still bore high applauſe,
And tho' darkneſs o'er-run,
The face of the ſun,
We, diamond-like, blaz'd to illumine the cauſe.
To him that firſt the work began, &c.

XVIII. SONG.

I.

Hail ſecret art! by heav'n deſign'd
To cultivate and cheer the mind;
Thy ſecrets are to all unknown,
But maſons juſt and true alone,
But maſons juſt and true alone.

CHORUS.

Then let us all their praiſes ſing,
Fellows to peaſant, prince, or king,
Fellows to peaſant, prince, or king.

II.

From weſt to eaſt we take our way,
To meet the bright approaching day;
That we to work may go in time,
And up the ſacred ladder clime.
And up the, &c.
Chor. Then let us all, &c.

III.

Bright rays of glory did inſpire,
Our maſter great who came from Tyre;

Still

Still ſacred hiſtory keeps his name,
Who did the glorious temple frame.
Who did, &c.
Chor. Then let us, &c.

IV.

The noble art divinely rear'd
Uprightly built upon the ſquare;
Encompaſs'd by the powers divine,
Shall ſtand until the end of time.
Shall ſtand, &c.
Chor. Then let us all, &c.

V.

No human eye thy beauties ſee,
But maſons truly juſt and free;
Inſpir'd by each heav'nly ſpark,
Whilſt Cowans labour in the dark.
Chor. Then let us all, &c.

To the memory of the Tyrian artiſt, &c.

XIX. SONG.

To the tune of the Enter'd-'Prentice.

I.

Come are you prepar'd,
Your ſcaffolds well rear'd
Bring mortar and temper it purely;
'Tis all ſafe I hope,
Well brac'd with each rope,
Your ledgers and putlocks ſecurely.

Then

II.

Then next your bricks bring,
It is time to begin,
For the ſun with its rays is adorning;
The day's fair and clear,
No rain you need fear,
'Tis a charming, lovely, fine morning.

III.

Pray where are your tools,
Your line and plumb-rules.
Each man to his work let him ſtand boys.
Work ſolid and ſure,
Upright and ſecure,
And your building be ſure will be ſtrong boys.

IV.

Pray make no miſtake,
But true your joints break,
And take care that you follow your leaders;
Work, rake, back, and tueth,
And make your work ſmooth,
And be ſure that you fill up your headers.

To the memory of Vitruvius, Angelo, Wren, and other noble artiſts, &c.

XX. SONG.

Tune. On, on my dear Brethren.

I.

The curious vulgar could never deviſe,
What ſocial free-maſons ſo highly do prize;
No human conjecture, no ſtudy in ſchools,
Such fruitleſs attempts are the actions of fools.

II.

Sublime are our maxims, our plan from above
Old as the creation cemented with love;
To promote all the virtues adorning man's life,
Subduing our paſſions, preventing all ſtrife,

III.

Purſue my dear brethren, embrace with great care,
A ſyſtem adapted our actions to ſquare;
Whoſe Origin clearly appeareth divine,
Obſerve how its precepts to virtue incline.

IV.

The ſecrets of nature king Solomon knew,
The names of all trees in the foreſt that grew;
Architecture his ſtudy, free-maſons ſole guide,
Thus finiſh'd his temple, antiquity's pride.

V.

True ancient free-maſons our arts did conceal,
Their hearts were ſincere and not prone to reveal;
Here's the widow ſon's mem'ry, that mighty great ſage,
Who ſkilfully handled plumb, level, and gage.

VI.

Toaſt next our grand-maſter of noble repute,
No brother preſuming his laws to diſpute;
No diſcord, no faction, our lodge ſhall divide;
Here truth, love, and friendſhip, muſt always abide.

VII.

Ceaſe, ceaſe ye vain rebels, your country's diſgrace;
To ravage like Vandals, our arts to deface;
Learn, how to grow loyal, our king to defend,
And live like free-maſons, your lives to amend.

To the ancient ſons of peace.

XXI. SONG.

To the foregoing tune.

I.

We brethren free-maſons, let's mark the great name;
Moſt ancient and loyal, recorded by fame:
In unity met, let us merrily ſing;
The life of a maſon's like that of a king.

II.

No diſcord, no envy, amongſt us ſhall be,
No confuſion of tongues, but let's all agree:
Not like building of Babel, confound one another;
But fill up your glaſſes, and drink to each brother.

III.

A tower they wanted to lead them to bliſs,
I hope there's no brother but knows what it is;
Three principal ſteps in our ladder there be,
A myſt'ry to all but thoſe that are free.

IV.

Let the ſtrength of our reaſon keep th' ſquare of our heart,
And virtue adorn ev'ry man in his part;
The name of a Cowan we'll not ridicule,
But pity his folly and count him a fool.

V.

Let's lead a good life whilſt power we have,
And when that our bodies are laid in the grave,
We hope with good conſcience to heav'n to climb,
And give Peter the paſs-word, the token and ſign.

VI.

Saint Peter he opens and ſo we paſs in,
To a place that's prepared for all thoſe free from ſin;
To that heav'nly lodge which is tyl'd moſt ſecure,
A place that's prepar'd for all maſons that's pure.

To all pure and upright maſons.

XXII. SONG.

Tune. What tho' they call me country laſs.

I.

What tho' they call us maſon-fools,
We prove, by g'ometry, our rules
Surpaſs the arts they teach in ſchools,
They charge us falſely then:
We make it plainly to appear,
By our behaviour every where,
That when you meet with maſons there,
You meet with gentlemen.

II.

'Tis true we once have charged been,
With diſobedience to our queen *,
But after monarchs plain have ſeen,
The ſecrets ſhe had ſought:
We

* Queen Elizabeth hearing the maſons had certain ſecrets that could not be revealed to her (for that ſhe could not be grand-maſter) and being jealous of all ſecret aſſemblies, &c. ſhe ſent an armed force to break up their annual grand lodge at York, on St. John's day, the 27th of December, 1561. Sir Thomas Sackville (then grand-maſter) inſtead of being diſmay'd at ſuch an unexpected viſit, gallantly told the officers, that nothing could give him greater pleaſure than ſeeing them in the grand lodge, as it would give him an opportunity of convincing them, that free-maſonry was the moſt uſeful ſyſtem that ever was founded on divine and moral laws----, &c. The conſequence of his arguments were that he made the chief men free-maſons, who (on their return) made an honourable report to the queen, ſo that ſhe never more attempted to diſlodge or diſturb them, but eſteemed them as a peculiar ſort of men, that cultivated peace and friendſhip, arts and ſciences, without medling in the affairs of church or ſtate.

We hatch no plots againſt the ſtate,
Nor 'gainſt great men in pow'r prate,
But all that's noble, good, and great,
Is daily by us taught.

III.

Theſe noble ſtructures which we ſee,
Rais'd by our fam'd ſociety,
Surpriſe the world; then ſhall not we,
Give praiſe to maſonry:
Let thoſe who do deſpiſe the art,
Live in a cave or ſome deſart,
To heard with beaſts, from men apart,
For their ſtupidity.

IV.

But view thoſe ſavage nations, where
Free-maſonry did ne'er appear,
What ſtrange upoliſh'd brutes they are;
Then think on maſonry.
It makes us courteous men alway,
Gen'rous, hoſpitable, and gay,
What other art the like can ſay;
Then a health to maſons free.

Proſperity to the moſt ancient and moſt honourable Craft.

XXIII. SONG.

I.

Glorious craft which fires the mind,
With ſweet harmony and love;
Surely thou wer't firſt deſign'd,
A fore-taſte of the Joys above.

II.

Pleaſures always on thee wait,
Thou reformeſt Adam's race;

Strength

Strength and beauty in thee meet,
Wiſdom's radiant in thy face.

III.

Arts and virtues now combine,
Friendſhip raiſes chearful mirth;
All united to refine,
Man from's groſſer part of earth.

IV.

Stately temples now ariſe,
And on lofty columns ſtand;
Mighty domes attempt the ſkies;
To adorn this happy land.

To the ſecret and ſilent, &c.

XXIV. SONG.

I.

Let malicious people cenſure,
They're not worth a maſon's anſwer;
While we drink and ſing,
With no conſcience ſting;
Let their evil genius plague 'em,
And for Mollies devil take 'em;
We'll be free and merry,
Drink port and ſherry;
Till the ſtars at midnight ſhine,
And our eyes with them combine;
The dark night to baniſh,
Thus we will repleniſh
Nature, whilſt the glaſſes
With the bottle paſſes:

Brother

Brother maſon free,
Here's to thee, to thee;
And let it run the table round,
While envy does the maſons foes confound.

To all maſons who walk the line, &c.

XXV. SONG.

I.

Come, come my brethren dear,
Now we're aſſembled here,
Exalt your voices clear,
With harmony;
Here's none ſhall be admitted in,
Were he a lord, a duke, or king,
He's counted but an empty thing,
Except he's free.

CHORUS.

Let ev'ry man take glaſs in hand,
Drink bumpers to our maſter grand,
As long as he can ſit or ſtand,
With decency.

II.

By our arts we prove,
Emblems of truth and love,
Types given from above,
To thoſe that are free;
There's ne'er a king that fills a throne,
Will ever be aſhamed to own,
Thoſe ſecrets to the world unknown,
But ſuch as we.

Chor. Let ev'ry man, &c.

Now

II.

Now ladies try your arts.
To gain us men of parts,
Who beſt can charm your hearts,
Becauſe we're free;
Take us, try us, and you'll find,
We're true, loving, juſt, and kind,
And taught to pleaſe a lady's mind,
By maſonry.

Chor. Let ev'ry man, &c.

GRAND CHORUS.

God bleſs king GEORGE long may he reign,
To curb the pride of foes that's vain,
And with his conq'ring ſword maintain,
Free-maſonry.
To the king's good health;
The nation's wealth;
The prince GOD bleſs;
The fleet ſucceſs;
The lodge no leſs.

XXVI. SONG.

Tune. The Fairy Elves.

I.

Come follow, follow me,
Ye jovial maſons free;
Come follow all the rules,
That e'er was taught in ſchools,
By Solomon, that maſon king,
Who honour to the craft did bring.

He's

II.

He's juſtly call'd the wiſe,
His fame doth reach the ſkies;
He ſtood upon the ſquare,
And did the temple rear;
With true level, plumb, and gage,
He prov'd the wonder of the age.

III.

The mighty maſon lords,
Stood firmly to their words;
They had it in eſteem,
For which they're juſtly deem'd;
Why ſhou'd not their example prove,
Our preſent craft to live in love.

IV.

The royal art and word,
Is kept upon record;
In upright hearts and pure,
While ſun and moon endure;
Not written but indented on,
The heart of e'ery arch-maſon.

V.

And as for Hiram's art,
We need not to impart:
The ſcripture plainly ſhews,
From whence his knowledge flows;
His genius was ſo much refin'd,
His peer he has not left behind.

VI.

Then let not any one,
Forget the widow's ſon;

But toaſt his memory,
In glaſſes charg'd full high;
And when our proper time is come,
Like brethren part, and ſo go home.

To him that did the temple rear, &c.

XXVII. SONG.

I.

With plumb, level, and ſquare, to work let's prepare,
And join in a ſweet harmony;
Let's fill up each glaſs, and around let it paſs,
To all honeſt men that are free,
To all honeſt men that are free.

CHORUS.

Then a fig for all thoſe, who are free-maſons foes,
Our ſecrets we'll never impart;
But in unity we'll always agree,
And chorus it, proſper our art, proſper our art,
And chorus it, proſper our art.

II.

When we're properly cloathed, the maſter diſcloſes
The ſecrets that lodg'd in his breaſt;
Thus we ſtand by the cauſe, that deſerves great applauſe,
In which we are happily bleſt.
In which, &c.

Chor. Then a fig for all thoſe, &c.

The

III.

The bible's our guide, and by that we'll abide,
Which ſhews that our actions are pure;
The compaſs and ſquare, are emblems moſt rare;
Of juſtice our cauſe to inſure.
Of juſtice, &c.
Chor. Then a fig for all thoſe, &c.

IV.

The Cowan may ſtrive, nay plot and contrive,
To find out our great myſtery;
The inquiſitive wife, may in vain ſpend her life,
For ſtill we'll be honeſt and free.
For ſtill, &c.
Chor. Then a fig for all thoſe, &c.

V.

True brotherly love, we always approve,
Which makes us all mortals excel;
If a knave ſhould by chance, to this grandeur advance,
That villain we'll ſtraightway expel,
That villain, &c.
Chor. Then a fig, &c.

VI.

Our lodge that's ſo pure, to the end will endure,
In virtue and true ſecrecy;
Then let's toaſt a good health, with honour and wealth,
To attend the bleſt hands made us free,
To attend, &c.
Chor. Then a fig for all thoſe, &c.

To each true and faithful heart,
That ſtill preſerves the ſecret art.

XXVIII. SONG.

I.

King Solomon, that wiſe projecture,
In maſonry took great delight;
And Hiram, that great architector,
Whoſe actions ſhall ever ſhine bright:
From the heart of a true honeſt maſon,
There's none can the ſecret remove;
Our maxims are juſtice, morality,
Friendſhip, and brotherly love.
Fa, la, la, &c.

II.

We meet like true friends on the ſquare,
And part on a level that's fair;
Alike we reſpect king and beggar,
Provided they're juſt and ſincere:
We ſcorn an ungenerous action,
None can with free-maſons compare;
We love for to live within compaſs,
By rules that are honeſt and fair.
Fa, la, la, &c.

III.

Succeſs to all accepted maſons,
There's none can their honour pull down;
Fore'er ſince the glorious creation,
Theſe brave Men were held in renown:

When Adam was king of all nations,
He form'd a plan with all ſpeed;
And ſoon made a ſweet habitation,
For him and his companion Eve.
Fa, la, la, &c.

IV.

We exclude all talkative fellows,
That will babble and prate paſt their wit;
They ne'er ſhall come into our ſecret,
For they're neither worthy nor fit:
But the perſons that's well recommended,
And we find them honeſt and true;
When our lodge is well tyl'd we'll prepare 'em,
Like maſons our work we'll purſue.
Fa, la, la, &c.

V.

There's ſome fooliſh people reject us,
For which they're highly to blame;
They cannot ſhew any objection,
Or reaſon for doing the ſame:
The art's a divine inſpiration,
As all honeſt men will declare;
So here's to all true-hearted brothers,
That live within compaſs and ſquare,
Fa, la, la, &c.

To all thoſe who live within compaſs and ſquare.

XXIX. SONG.

By brother R—— P——, Eſq;

Tune. By Jove I'll be free.

I.

Of all inſtitutions to form well the mind,
And make us to every virtue inclin'd;
None can with the craft of free-maſons compare,
Nor teach us ſo truly our actions to ſquare;
For it was ordain'd by our founder's decree,
That we ſhould be loyal, be loving, and free,
be loving, and free, &c.

II.

We in harmony, friendſhip, and unity meet,
And every brother moſt lovingly greet;
And, when we ſee one in diſtreſs, ſtill impart
Some comfort to cheer and enliven his heart;
Thus we always live and for ever agree,
Reſolved to be loyal, moſt loving, and free,
moſt loving and free, &c.

III.

By points of good fellowſhip we ſtill accord,
Obſerving each brother's true ſign, grip, and word;
Which from our Great Architect was handed down,
And ne'er will to any but maſons be known;
Then here's to our brethren of every degree,
Who always are loyal, are loving, and free,
are loving, and free, &c.

Thus

IV.

Thus we interchangeably hold one another,
To let mankind ſee how we are link'd to each brother;
No monarch that ſecret knot can untie,
Nor can prying mortals the reaſon know why;
For our hearts, like our hands, ſtill united ſhall be;
Still ſecret, ſtill loyal, ſtill loving, and free,
ſtill loving and free, &c.

To all free ſocial maſons, &c.

XXX. Song to the foregoing tune.

By brother B——d Cl——ke.

Magna eſt veritas et prævalebit.

I.

To the ſcience that virtue and art do maintain,
Let the muſe pay her tribute in ſoft gliding ſtrain;
Thoſe myſtic perfections ſo fond to diſplay,
As far as allowed to poetical lay;
Each profeſſion and claſs of mankind muſt agree,
That maſons alone are the men who are free,
the men who are free, &c.

II.

Their origin they with great honour can trace,
From the Sons of religion and ſingular grace;
Great Hiram and Solomon, virtue to prove,
Made this the grand ſecret of friendſhip and love;
Each profeſſion and claſs of mankind muſt agree,
That maſons, of all men, are certainly free, &c. are certainly free, &c.

The

III.

The ſmart and the beau, the coquet and the prude,
The dull and the comic, the heavy and rude;
In vain may enquire, then fret, and deſpiſe
An art that's ſtill ſecret 'gainſt all they deviſe;
Each profeſſion and claſs of mankind muſt agree,
That maſons, tho' ſecret, are loyal and free,
are loyal and free, &c.

IV.

Commit it to thouſands of different mind,
And this golden precept you'll certainly find;
Nor intereſt nor terror can make them reveal,
Without juſt admittance, what they ſhould conceal;
Each profeſſion and claſs of mankind muſt agree,
That maſons alone are both ſecret and free,
both ſecret and free, &c.

V.

Fair virtue and friendſhip, religion and love,
The motive of this noble ſcience ſtill prove;
'Tis the lock and key of the moſt godly rules,
And not to be truſted to knaves or to fools;
Each profeſſion and claſs of mankind muſt agree,
That antient free-maſons are ſteady and free,
are ſteady and free, &c.

VI.

Th' Iſr'lites diſtinguiſh'd their friends from their foes,
By ſigns and characters; then ſay why ſhould thoſe
Of vice and unbelief be permitted to pry,
Into ſecrets that maſons alone ſhould deſcry;
Each profeſſion and claſs of mankind muſt agree,
That maſons, of all men, are ſecret and free,
are ſecret and free, &c.

The

VII.

The dunce he imagines, that ſcience and art
Depend on ſome compact or magical part;
Thus men are ſo ſtupid, to think that the cauſe
Of our conſtitution's againſt divine laws;
Each profeſſion and claſs of mankind muſt agree,
That maſons are jovial, religious, and free, religious, and free, &c.

VIII.

Puſh about the briſk bowl, let it circl'ing paſs;
Let each choſen brother lay hold on his glaſs,
And drink to the heart that will always conceal,
And the tongue that our ſecrets will ne'er reveal;
Each profeſſion and claſs of mankind muſt agree,
That the ſons of old Hiram are certainly free,
are certainly free, &c.

To the innocent and faithful crafts, &c.

XXXI. SONG.

By Brother J—— C——.

Tune. Rule Britannia, &c.

I.

When earth's foundation firſt was laid,
By the Almighty artiſt's hand;
It was then our perfect, our perfect laws were made,
Eſtabliſh'd by his ſtrict command.
Hail! myſterious hail! glorious maſonry,
That makes us ever great and free.

II.

As man throughout for ſhelter ſought,
In vain from place to place did roam ;
Until from heaven, from heaven he was taught,
To plan, to build, and fix his home.
Hail! myſterious, &c.

III.

Hence illuſtrious roſe our art,
And now in beauteous piles appear ;
Which ſhall to endleſs, to endleſs time impart,
How worthy and how great we are.
Hail ! myſterious, &c.

IV.

Nor we leſs fam'd for ev'ry tie,
By which the human thought is bound ;
Love, truth, and friendſhip, and friendſhip ſocially,
Doth join our hearts and hands around.
Hail ! myſterious, &c.

V.

Our actions ſtill by virtue bleſt,
And to our precepts ever true ;
The world admiring, admiring ſhall requeſt
To learn, and our bright paths purſue.
Hail ! myſterious, &c.

To all true maſons and upright,
Who ſaw the eaſt where roſe the light.

XXXII. Song

XXXII. SONG.

I.

Come boys let us more liquor get,
Since jovially we are all met,
Since jovially, &c.
Here none will diſagree;
Let's drink and ſing, and all combine,
In ſongs to praiſe that art divine,
In ſongs, &c.
That's call'd free-maſonry.

II.

True knowledge ſeated in the head,
Do teach us maſons how to tread,
Do teach, &c.
The paths we ought to go;
By which we ever friends create,
Drown care and ſtrife, and all debate,
Drown care, &c.
Count none but fools our foe.

III.

Here ſorrow knows not how to weep,
And watchful grief is lull'd aſleep,
And watchful, &c.
In our lodge we know no care;
Join hand in hand before we part,
Each brother take his glaſs with heart,
Each brother, &c
And toaſt ſome charming fair:

IV.

Hear me ye gods, and whilſt I live
Good maſons and good liquor give,
Good maſons, &c.
Then always happy me;
Likewiſe a gentle ſhe I crave,
Until I'm ſummon'd to my grave,
But when I'm &c.
Adieu my lodge and ſhe.

To each charming Fair and faithful ſhe,
That loves the craft of maſonry.

XXXIII. SONG.

I.

Guardian genius of our art divine,
Unto thy faithful ſons appear;
Ceaſe now o'er ruins of the eaſt to pine,
And ſmile in blooming beauties here.

II.

Egypt, Syria, and proud Babylon,
No more thy bliſsful preſence claim;
In England fix thy ever-during throne,
Where Myriads do confeſs thy name.

III.

The ſciences from eaſtern regions brought,
Which, after ſhewn in Greece and Rome,
Are here in ſeveral ſtately lodges taught;
To which remoteſt brethren come.

Behold

IV.

Behold what ſtrength our riſing domes uprears,
'Till mixing with the azure ſkies;
Behold what beauty thro' the whole appears,
So wiſely built they muſt ſurpriſe.

V.

Nor are we only to theſe arts confin'd,
For we the paths of virtue trace;
By us man's rugged nature is refin'd,
And poliſh'd into love and peace.

To the increaſe of perpetual friendſhip, and peace amongſt the antient craft.

XXXIV.

An ODE on MASONRY.

By brother J. Banks.

Genius of maſonry deſcend,
In myſtic numbers while we ſing;
Enlarge our ſouls, the craft defend,
And hither all thy influence bring;
With ſocial thoughts our boſoms fill,
And give thy turn to every will.

While yet Batavia's wealthy powers,
Neglect thy beauties to explore;
And winding Seine adorn'd with towers,
Laments thee wandering from his ſhore;
Here ſpread thy wings and glad theſe iſles,
Where arts reſide and freedom ſmiles.

Behold

Behold the lodge riſe into view,
The work of induſtry and art;
'Tis grand, and regular, and true,
For ſo is each good maſon's heart;
Friendſhip cements it from the ground,
And ſecrecy ſhall fence it round.

A ſtately dome o'er-looks our eaſt,
Like orient Phœbus in the morn;
And two tall pillows in the weſt,
At once ſupport us and adorn;
Upholden thus the ſtructure ſtands,
Untouch'd by ſacrilegious hands.

For concord form'd our ſouls agree,
Nor fate this union ſhall deſtroy;
Our toils and ſports alike are free,
And all is harmony and joy;
So Salem's temple roſe by rule,
Without the noiſe of noxious tool.

As when Amphion tun'd his ſong,
Ev'n rugged rocks the muſic knew;
Smooth into form they glide along,
And to a Thebes the deſart grew;
So at the ſound of Hiram's voice,
We riſe, we join, and we rejoice.

Then may our vows to virtue move,
To virtue own'd in all her parts;
Come candour, innocence, and love,
Come and poſſeſs our faithful hearts;

Mercy, who feeds the hungry poor,
And ſilence, guardian of the door,

As thou Aſtræa, tho' from earth,
When men on men began to prey;
Thou fled'ſt to claim celeſtial birth,
Down from Olympus wing'd thy way;
And mindful of thy ancient ſeat,
Be preſent ſtill where maſons meet.

Immortal ſcience too, be near;
We own thy empire o'er the mind;
Dreſs'd in thy radient robes appear,
With all thy beauteous train behind;
Invention young and blooming there,
Here's GEOMETRY with rule and ſquare.

In Egypt's FABRIC learning dwelt,
And Roman breaſts cou'd virtue hide;
But Vulcan's rage the building felt,
And Brutus laſt of Romans died;
Since when, diſpers'd the ſiſters rove,
Or fill paternal thrones above.

But loſt to half of human race,
With us the virtues ſhall revive;
And driven no more from place to place,
Here ſcience ſhall be kept alive;
And manly taſte, the child of ſenſe,
Shall baniſh vice and dulneſs hence.

United thus and for theſe ends,
Let ſcorn deride and envy rail;

From

From age to age the craft deſcends,
And what we build ſhall never fail;
Nor ſhall the world our works ſurvey,
But every brother keeps the key.

To each faithful brother, both ancient and young;
That governs his paſſion, and bridles his tongue.

XXXV.

The PROGRESS of MASONRY.

I.

Pray lend me your ears my dear brethren awhile,
Full ſober my ſenſe tho' joaking my ſtyle;
I ſing of ſuch wonders unknown to all thoſe,
Who flutter in verſe or who hobble in proſe.
Derry down, down, down derry down.

II.

As all in confuſion the chaos yet lay,
E're evening and morning had made the firſt day;
The unform'd materials lay tumbling together,
Like ſo many Dutchmen in thick foggy weather.
Derry down, &c.

III.

When to this confuſion no end there appear'd,
The ſovereign maſon's word ſudden was heard;
Then teem'd mother chaos with maternal throws,
By which this great lodge of the world then aroſe.
Derry down, &c.

Then

IV.

Then earth and the heavens with Jubile rung,
And all the creation of Maſonry ſung;
When lo! to compleat and adorn the gay ball,
Old Adam was made the grand-maſter of all
Derry down, &c.

V.

But Satan met Eve when ſhe was a gadding,
And ſet her (as ſince, all her daughters) a madding;
To find out the ſecrets of free-maſonry
She eat of the fruit of the forbidden tree.
Derry down, &c.

VI.

Then as ſhe was filled with high flowing fancies,
As e'er was fond girl who deals in Romances;
She thought her with knowledge ſufficiently cram'd
And ſaid to her ſpouſe, My dear eat and be d——d.
Derry down, &c.

VII.

But Adam aſtoniſh'd like one ſtruck with thunder,
Beheld her from head to foot over with wonder;
Now you have done this thing, Madam, ſaid he,
For your ſake no women free-maſons ſhall be.
Derry down, &c.

VIII.

Now as ſhe bewail'd her in ſorowful ditty,
The good man beheld her, and on her took pity;
Free-maſons are tender, ſo for the ſad dame
He made her an apron to cover her ſhame.
Derry down, &c.

IX.

Then did they ſolace in mutual joys,
Till in proceſs of time they had two chopping boys;
The prieſt of the pariſh, as goſſips devis'd,
By Names Cain and Abel the youths circumcis'd.
Derry down, &c.

X.

Old father Seth next mounts on the ſtage,
In manners ſevere, but in maſonry ſage;
He built up two pillars, they were tall and thick,
One was made of ſtone the other of brick.
Derry down, &c.

XI.

On them he engrav'd with wonderful ſkill,
Each lib'ral ſcience with adamant quill;
Proportion and rule he form'd by the ſquare,
And directed the uſe of all maſonry there.
Derry down, &c.

XII.

But ſoon did mankind behave paſt enduring,
In drinking, in ſwearing, in fighting and whoring;
Then Jove aroſe, and, fierce in his Anger,
Said, That he wou'd ſuffer ſuch miſcreants no longer.
Derry down, &c.

XIII.

Then from their high windows the heavens did pour,
Forty days and nights one continual ſhower;
Till nought could be ſeen but the waters around,
And in this great deluge moſt mortals were drown'd.
Derry down, &c.

Sure

XIV.

Sure ne'er was beheld ſo dreadful a ſight,
As the old world in ſuch a very odd plight;
For there were to be ſeen all animals ſwimming,
Men, monkeys, prieſts, lawyers, cats, lapdogs, and [women.
Derry down, &c.

XV.

There floated a debtor away from his duns,
And next father grey-beard ſtark naked 'midſt nuns;
Likewiſe a poor huſband not minding his life,
Contented in drowning to ſhake off his wife.
Derry down, &c.

XVI.

A king and a cobler next mingled to view
And ſpendthrift young heirs there were not a few;
A whale and a dutchman came down with the tide,
And a reverend old Biſhop by a young wench's ſide.
Derry down, &c.

XVII.

But Noah being wiſeſt, faithful, and upright,
He built him an Ark ſo ſtout and ſo tight;
Tho' heaven and earth ſeem'd to come together,
He was ſafe in his lodge and fear'd not the weather.
Derry down, &c.

XVIII.

Then after the flood, like a brother ſo true,
Who ſtill had the good of the craft in his view,
He delved the ground and he planted the vine,
He form'd a lodge, aye and gave his lodge wine.
Derry down, &c.

XIX.

Let ſtateſmen toſs, tumble, and jumble the ball;
We ſit ſafe in our lodge, and we laugh at them all:
Let biſhops wear lawn ſleeves, and kings have their Ointment,
Free-maſonry ſure is by heaven's appointment.
Derry down, &c.

XX.

Now charge my dear brethren and chorus with me,
A health to all maſons both honeſt and free;
Nor be leſs our duty unto our good king,
So God bleſs Great GEORGE let each brother ſing.
Derry down, &c.

To the King and the craft (as the Maſter Song)

XXXVI. SONG.

By brother L——— D———,

Tune. Mutual Love.

I.

As Maſons once on Shinar's plain,
Met to revive their arts again,
Did mutually agree,
Did mutually, &c.
So now we met in Britain's Iſle,
And make the royal craft to ſmile,
In antient maſonry,
In antient, &c.

II.

The maſons in this happy land,
Have reviv'd the antient grand,
And the ſtrong Tuſcan laid,
And the, &c.
Each faithful brother by a ſign,
Like Salem's ſons each other join,
And ſoon each order made,
And ſoon, &c.

III.

Thrice happy bleſt fraternity,
Whoſe baſis is ſweet unity,
And makes us all agree,
And makes, &c.
Kings, dukes, and lords to us are kind,
As we to beggars when we find,
Them ſkill'd in maſonry,
Them ſkill'd, &c.

IV.

How happy are the ancient brave,
Whom no Cowan can deceive,
And may they ſo remain,
And may, &c.
No modern craftſman e'er did know,
What ſigns our maſters to us ſhew,
Tho' long they ſtrove in vain,
Tho' long, &c.

V.

The horn'd Buck and Gallican *,
As the monkey imitates the man,
Their clubs do lodges call,
Their clubs, &c.
While antient maſons know full well,
No fools like thoſe amongſt them dwell,
No, no, nor never ſhall,
No, no, nor never ſhall.

VI.

My brethren all take glaſs in hand,
And toaſt our noble maſter grand,
And in full chorus ſing,
And in &c.
A Health to ancient maſons free,
Throughout the globe where'er they be,
And ſo God ſave the King,
And ſo God ſave the King.

To all antient Maſons, whereſoever diſpers'd or oppreſs'd, round the Globe, &c.

* Here is meant a certain Club who call themſelves Antigallic Maſons, and not the laudable Aſſociation of Anti-gallicans, whom I eſteem as an honourable and uſeful Society and worthy of Imitation.

XXXVII. SONG.

By the foregoing Hand.

Tune. Greedy Midas.

I.

With harmony and flowing wine,
My brethren all come with me join;
To celebrate this happy day,
And to our maſter homage pay.

II.

Hail! happy, happy, ſacred place,
Where friendſhip ſmiles in ev'ry face;
And royal art doth fill the chair,
Adorned with his noble ſquare.

III.

Next ſing my muſe our warden's praiſe,
With chorus loud in tuneful lays;
Oh! may theſe columns ne'er decay,
Until the world diſſolves away.

IV.

My brethren all come join with me,
To ſing the praiſe of maſonry;
The noble, faithful, and the brave,
Whoſe arts ſhall live beyond the grave.

Let

Let envy hide her ſhameful face,
Before us ancient ſons of Peace;
Whoſe golden precepts ſtill remain,
Free from envy, pride, or ſtain.

To Salemn's Sons, &c.

XXXVIII. SONG.

By the foregoing Hand.

Tune. Ye mortals that love drinking.

I.

Ye ancient Sons of Tyre,
In chorus join with me:
And imitate your fire,
Who was fam'd for maſonry:
His antient dictates follow,
And from them never part;
Let each ſing like Apollo,
And praiſe the royal art.

II.

Like Salem's ſecond ſtory,
We raiſe the craft again;
Which ſtill retains its glory,
The ſecret here remain:
Amongſt true ancient maſons,
Who always did diſdain
Theſe new invented faſhions;
Which we know are vain.

Our

III.

Our Temple now rebuilding,
You ſee grand Columns * riſe;
The MAGI they reſembling,
They are both good and wiſe:
Each ſeem as firm as Atlas,
Who on his ſhoulders bore
The ſtarry frame of heaven;
What mortals can do more?

IV.

Come now my loving brethren,
In chorus join all round;
With flowing Wine full bumpers,
Let maſon's healths be crown'd;
And let each envious Cowan,
By our good Actions ſee;
That we are made free and loving,
By art of Maſonry.

To the Memory of P. H. Z. L. and J. A.

XXXIX. SONG.

To the tune of the Enter'd 'Prentice.

From the depths let us raiſe,
Our voices and praiſe,
The works of the glorious creation;
And extol the great fame,
Of our maker's great name,
And his love to an accepted maſon.

* Grand Officers.

II.

In primitive times,
When men by high crimes,
Had cauſed a great devaſtation;
When the floods did abound,
And all mankind were drown'd
Save the free and the accepted maſons.

III.

There were architects four,
Where billows did roar,
Were ſaved from that great inundation;
Who's father from on high,
Taught Geometry,
That honour'd ſcience of a maſon.

IV.

In an ark that was good,
Made of good Gopher wood,
And was built by divine ordination,
And the firſt in his time,
That planted a vine,
Was a free and an accepted Maſon.

V.

Then Nimrod the great
Did next undertake
To build him to heav'n a ſtation;
But tongues of all kind,
Prevented his mind,
For he was no excellent maſon.

When

VI.

When Pharaoh the king
Of Egypt, did bring
To bondage our whole generation;
That king got a fall,
And his magicians all,
By a princely and learned wife maſon.

VII.

Then thro' the Red-Sea,
Heav'n guided their way,
By two Pillars of divine ordination;
And Pharaos great Train,
Were loſt in the main,
For purſuing an army of maſons.

VIII.

When Ameleck's king,
Great forces did bring,
Likewiſe the great Midianite nation;
Thoſe kings got a fall,
And their great armies all,
And their wealth fell a ſpoil to thoſe maſons.

IX.

In the plains they did rear
A pavillion fair,
The beauty of all the creation;
Each Part in its ſquare,
Which none cou'd prepare,
Save a free and an accepted maſon.

X.

King Solomon, he
Was known to be free,
Built a holy grand lodge in his nation;
Each beautiful part
Was due to the art
Of Hiram the great learned maſon:

XI.

They to Jordan did go,
And met their proud Foe,
And fought the great Canaanite nation;
Whoſe gigantic ſtrain
Cou'd never ſuſtain
The Force of an Army of maſons.

XII.

Then let each maſon that's free,
Toaſt his memory,
Join hands without diſſimulation;
Let Cowans think on,
We know they are wrong,
Drink a health to an accepted maſon.

XIII.

But if any ſo mean,
Thro' avarice or ſtain,
Shou'd debaſe himſelf in this high ſtation,
That perſon ſo mean,
For ſuch curſed gain,
Should be ſlain by the hand of a maſon.
To all true and faithful Maſons.

XL. SONG.

I.

'Tis maſonry unites mankind,
To gen'rous actions forms the ſoul;
In friendly converſe all conjoin'd,
One ſpirit animates the whole.

II.

Where-e'er aſpiring domes ariſe,
Where-ever ſacred altars ſtand;
Thoſe altars blaze unto the ſkies,
Thoſe Domes proclaim the maſon's hand.

III.

As paſſions rough the ſoul diſguiſe,
Till ſcience cultivates the mind;
So the rude ſtone unſhapen lies,
Till by the maſon's Art refin'd.

IV.

Tho' ſtill our chief concern and care,
Be to deſerve a brother's name;
Yet ever mindful of the fair,
Their kindeſt influence we claim.

V.

Let wretches at our manhood rail;
But they who once our order prove,
Will own that we who build ſo well,
With equal energy can love.

VI.

Sing brethren then the craft divine,
(Beſt band of ſocial joy and mirth);
With choral ſound and cheerful wine,
Proclaim its virtues o'er the earth.

XLI. SONG.

I.

Once I was blind and cou'd not ſee,
And all was dark around;
But providence did pity me,
And ſoon a friend I found;
Thro' ſecret paths my friends me led;
Such Paths as bablers never tread.

II.

All ſtumbling blocks he took away,
That I might walk ſecure;
And brought me long e'er break of day,
To wiſdom's temple door;
Where there we both admittance found,
To myſtic Paths on hallow'd ground.

III.

Tho' haughty in my bold attempt,
Bleſt thoughts did me alarm;
Which hinted I was not exempt
(If raſh) from double harm;
Which quickly ſtopt my riſing pride,
And made me truſt more to my guide.

In

IV.

In ſolemn pace I was led up,
And paſs'd thro' the bright dome,
But ſoon I was obliged to ſtop,
Till I myſelf made known;
Then round in ancient form was brought,
For to obtain that which I ſought.

V.

With humble heart in proper form,
I liſten'd with good will;
And found, inſtead of noiſe and ſtorm,
That all was huſh'd and ſtill;
And ſoon a heav'nly ſound did hear,
That quite diſpell'd all doubt and fear.

VI.

The guardian of this myſtic charm,
In ſhining jewels dreſt;
Said, that I need fear no harm,
If faithful was my breaſt;
For tho' to rogues he was ſevere,
No harm an honeſt man need fear.

VII.

Bright wiſdom from his awful Throne,
Bid darkneſs to withdraw;
No ſooner ſaid but it was done,
And then----great things I ſaw;
But what they were----I now won't tell,
But ſafely in my breaſt ſhall dwell.

Then

VIII.

Then round and round me did he tie
An ancient noble charm;
Which future darkneſs will defy,
And ward of cowans harm;
With Inſtruments in number three,
To learn the art of GEOMETRY.

XLII. SONG.

By Brother Alexander Kennedy, Schoolmaſter.

I.

Attend, loving brethren, and to me give ear,
Our work being ended, lets lay aſide care;
Let mirth and good humour our ſenſes regale,
And mind that our ſecrets we never reveal,
And mind &c.

II.

With leave of his worſhip that there fills the chair,
Who governs our actions by compaſs and ſquare;
We'll ſing a few verſes in maſonry's praiſe,
Not fond of ambition we look for no bays,
Not fond, &c.

III.

Our ancient grand maſter, inſpir'd by the Lord,
On holy Moriah, as in ſcripture declar'd,
The ſtupendious ſtructure began for to frame,
In the month call'd Zif, and fourth year of his reign,
In the &c.

With

IV.

With level and ſquare the foundation began,
In length ſixty cubits, breadth nineteen and one;
Here maſonry ſhin'd above all other arts,
So ſublime the great ſecret the artiſt imparts.
So ſublime &c.

V.

Old Hiram of Tyre, king David's great friend,
Did Fir, Pine and Cedar from Lebanon ſend
To build the ſanctorum by maſonry's ſkill,
Subſequent unto the great architect's will.
Subſequent &c.

VI.

One hundred and fifty-three thouſand ſix hundred
Employ'd for the temple, we find they were number'd;
With crafts many thouſands and bearers of loads,
And maſters ſix hundred the text does record.
And maſters &c.

VII.

Who form'd themſelves into lodges they ſay,
Some eaſt and ſome weſt, ſome north and ſouth way,
In love, truth and juſtice go ſucceſsfully on,
In all well govern'd kingdoms that's under the ſun.
In all &c.

VIII.

Now let the briſk bumper go merrily round,
May our worthy maſter in honour abound,
May his inſtructive precepts to virtue us move
To live like true brethren in Friendſhip and love.
To live &c.

IX.

Let moderns and critics with impious rage,
Amuſe the vain town and againſt us engage;
Let Prichard and's followers apoſtates profane
With falſe tenets puzzle each lethargic brain,
With falſe &c.

X.

All health to our brethren of e'ery degree,
Diſpers'd round the globe, or land, or by ſea;
Preſerve them, ye powers, their virtues improve,
When we part on the level we may all meet above.
When we &c.

XLIII. SONG.

By Brother John Jackſon, S. G. W.

I.

See in the eaſt the maſter plac'd,
How graceful unto us the ſight;
His wardens juſt he doth intruſt,
His noble orders to ſet right.
Where-e'er he liſt, his deacons ſtraightway run,
To ſee the lodge well tyl'd and work begun.

II.

Like Tyre's ſons we then purſue
The noble ſcience we profeſs,
Each maſon to his calling true
Down to the loweſt from the beſt
Square, plum, and level we do all maintain,
Emblems of Juſtice are and ſhall remain.

III.

King Solomon the great maſon
Honour unto the Craft did raiſe,
The Tyrian prince and widow's ſon:
Let ev'ry brother jointly praiſe
Drink to the memory of all the three,
And toaſt their names in glaſſes charg'd full high.

XLIV. SONG.

By Brother John Cartwright of Cheadle in Lancaſhire.

Tune. Smile Britannia.

I.

Attend, attend the ſtrains
Ye maſons free, whilſt I
To celebrate your fame,
Your virtues ſound on high;
Accepted maſons free and bold,
Will never live the dupes to gold.

II.

Great Solomon the king,
Great architect of fame;
Of whom all coaſts did ring,
Rever'd a maſon's name:
Like him, accepted, free, and bold,
True wiſdom we prefer to gold.

III.

Since him the great and wiſe
Of every age and clime,
With fame that never dies,
Purſued the art ſublime;
Inſpir'd by heav'n, juſt and free,
Have honour'd much our myſtery.

IV.

The glorious paths of thoſe,
With heav'n-born wiſdom crown'd;
We every Day diſcloſe,
And tread on ſacred ground;
A maſon, righteous juſt and free,
Or elſe not worthy maſonry.

XLV. SONG.

By the foregoing Hand.

Tune. The Bonny Broom.

I.

To maſonry your voices raiſe,
Ye brethren of the craft;
To that, and our great maſter's praiſe,
Let bumpers now be quaff'd:
True friendſhip, love and concord join'd,
Poſſeſs a maſons heart;
Thoſe virtues beautify the mind,
And ſtill adorn the art.

CHORUS.

Hail, all hail, my brethren dear,
All hail to ye alway;
Regard the art, while ye have life,
Revere it every day.

II.

Whilſt thus in unity we join,
Our hearts ſtill good and true;
Inſpired by the grace divine,
And no baſe ends in view:
We friendly meet, ourſelves employ,
To improve the fruitful mind;
With bleſſings which can never cloy,
But dignify mankind.

Chor. Hail, all hail, &c.

III.

No flinty hearts amongſt us are,
We're generous and kind;
The needy man our fortune ſhares,
If him we worthy find:
Our charity from eaſt to weſt,
To each worthy object we
Diffuſe, as is the great beheſt,
To every man that's free.

Chor. Hail, all Hail. &c.

IV.

Thus bleſs'd and bleſſing well we know,
Our joys can never end;
For long as vital ſpirits flow,
A maſon finds a friend.

Then join your hearts and tongues with mine,
Our glorious art to praiſe;
Diſcreetly take the generous wine,
Let reaſon rule your ways.
Chorus. Hail, all hail, &c.

XLVI.

An ODE by the ſame Hand.

RECITATIVE.

Bleſs'd be the day that gave to me
The ſecrets of free-maſonry;
In that alone m' ambition's plac'd,
In that alone let me be grac'd;
No greater title let me bear,
Than what's pertaining to the ſquare.

AIR.

Tho' envious Mortals vainly try,
On us to caſt abſurdity,
We laugh at all their ſpleen;
The levell'd man, the upright heart,
Shall ſtill adorn our glorious art,
Nor mind their vile chagrin:
The ermin'd robe, the rev'rend Crozier too,
Have prov'd us noble, honeſt, juſt, and true.

CHORUS.

In vain then let prejudic'd mortals declare
Their hate of us maſons, we're truly ſincere;

If

If for that they deſpiſe us, their folly they prove,
For a maſon's grand maxim is brotherly love;
But yet, after all, if they'd fain be thought wiſe,
Let them enter the lodge, and we'll open their eyes.

XLVII. SONG.

I.

How bleſs'd are we from ignorance free'd
And the baſe Notions of mankind,
Here every virtuous moral deed
Inſtructs and fortifies the mind;
Hail! antient hallow'd ſolemn ground,
Where light and maſonry I found.

II.

Hence vile detractors from us fly,
Far to the gloomy Shades of night
Like owls that hate the mid-day ſky,
And ſink with envy from its light;
With them o'er graves and ruins rot,
For hating knowledge you know not.

III.

When we aſſemble on a hill,
Or in due form upon the plain;
Our maſter doth with learned ſkill
The ſecret plan and work explain:
No buſy eye, nor cowan's ear,
Can our grand myſtery ſee or hear.

Our

IV.

Our table deck'd with ſhining truth,
Sweet emblems that elate the heart;
While each attentive liſt'ning youth
Burns to perform his worthy part.
Reſolving with religious care,
To live by compaſs, rule and ſquare.

V.

Our maſter watching in the eaſt,
The golden ſtreaks of riſing ſun;
To ſee his men at labour plac'd,
Who all like willing crafts doth run:
Oh! may his wiſdom ever be
Honour to us and maſonry.

VI.

Not far from him as Gnomon true,
Beauty ſtands with watchful eye,
Whoſe chearful voice our ſpirits renew,
And each his labour doth lay by:
His kind refreſhing office ſtill,
Inſpires each craft in maſon's ſkill.

VII.

See in the weſt our oblong's length,
The brave Corinthian pillar ſtands
The lodges friend and greateſt ſtrength,
Rewarding crafts with liberal hands;
Sure this our lodge muſt laſting be,
Supported by theſe Columns three.

VIII.

As Bees from flowers honey brings,
Sweet treaſure to their maſter's ſtore;
So maſons do all ſacred things,
And wonders from the diſtant ſhores;
To enrich the lodge with wiſdom's light,
Where babling folly's loſt in night.

IX.

Each Roman chief did proudly view
Their temples riſing to the ſky,
And as they nations did ſubdue,
They rais'd triumphal arches high;
Which got us maſons ſuch a name,
As vies with mighty Cæſar's fame.

X.

*The kings who rais'd Diana's columns,
With royal art, by ſkilful hands;
As prieſts recorded in their volumes.
And poets ſung to diſtant lands:
Th' adoring world that did them ſee,
Forgot the enſhrin'd deity.

XI.

Such is our boaſt, my brethren dear,
Fellows to kings and princes too,
The maſter's gift —— was proud to wear,
As now the great and noble do;
The great the noble and the ſage,
MASONS rever'd from age to age.

* The Temple of Diana, at Epheſus.

CHORUS.

Then to each brother in diſtreſs,
Throughout the nations parts or climes,
Charge Brethren to his quick redreſs,
As maſons did in antient times;
From want and hardſhips ſet them free,
Bleſs'd with health and maſonry.
Nor once forget the lovely fair,
Divinely made of Adam's bone;
Whoſe heav'nly looks can baniſh care,
And eaſe the ſighing lovers moan;
To them whoſe ſoft enjoyment brings
Us heroes, architects and kings.

XLVIII. SONG.

By Brother E—— P——

I.

Come fill up a bumper, and let it go round,
Let mirth and good fellowſhip always abound;
And let the world ſee,
That free-maſonry,
Doth teach honeſt hearts to be jovial and free.

II.

Our lodge now compos'd of honeſt free hearts,
Our maſter moſt freely his ſecrets imparts;
And ſo we improve,
In knowledge and love,
By help from our mighty grand maſter above.

Let

III.

Let honour and friendſhip eternally reign,
Let each brother maſon the truth ſo maintain;
That all may agree,
That free-maſonry,
Doth teach honeſt hearts to be jovial and free.

IV.

In mirth and good fellowſhip we will agree,
For none are more bleſt or more happy than we;
And thus we'll endure,
While our actions are pure,
Kind heaven thoſe bleſſings to us doth inſure.

XLIX. SONG.

I.

Urania ſing, ſing the art divine,
Beauty, ſtrength and wiſdom grace each line;
Soar higher than Jove's fam'd bird can go,
Tho' out of ſight, his flight's too low;
Boaſt Ubiquerians from this your pedigree,
But we from Jove take maſonry.

II.

When the great architect deſign'd
Brooding nature's plan, and made mankind;
Then he ordain'd the maſon's orders fair,
For maſonry was all his care;

By omniſcience and free-maſonry,
The jarring elements he made agree.

III.

The Almighty, by maſonry, did ſcheme
His holy dwelling place, and heav'n did name;
Made many manſions, which he ſupplied with light,
Proceeding from his Eſſence bright,
With ſhining ſtars adorn'd the vaulted ſkies;
To raiſe our wonder and ſurpriſe.

IV.

By Maſonry, this ſtupendious Ball
He pois'd on geometry, and meaſur'd all
With lines eaſt and weſt; alſo from north to ſouth,
This ſpacious lodge he meaſur'd out;
And adorned with precious jewels three,
As uſeful lights in maſonry.

V.

To rule the day the Almighty made the ſun,
To rule the night he alſo made the moon;
And god-like Adam, a maſter maſon free,
To rule and teach Poſterity;
Sanctity of reaſon, and majeſty of thought,
Amongſt free-maſons ſhould be ſought.

VI.

In the deluge, where mortals loſt their lives,
God ſav'd four worthy maſons and their wives;
And in the ark great Noah a lodge did hold,
Shem and Japheth his wardens we are told;

And

And Ham, as tyler, order'd to ſecure
From all their wives the ſecret door*

VII.

When Iſrael's ſons were held in ſlavery,
God ſent his word and ſign to ſet them free;
Nightly by fire, and in a cloud by day,
He pav'd his lov'd free-maſons way;
Thro' the Red-Sea, with wond'rous myſtery,
From Pharaoh's yoke he ſet them free.

VIII.

On Horeb's mount great Moſes did ſtand,
With warden's twain and rod of God in hand;
Devoutly pray'd by word and ſign to heav'n,
While to his deputy, conqueſt was giv'n;
When on mount Nebo he ſaw the land and died,
Jehovah did his time provide.

IX.

The world's great wonders, mankind agree,
Their beauties owe to the art of maſonry;
Epheſus' temple, the walls of Babylon,
And labyrinths wond'rous works unknown;
The Pyramids, Mauſoleum, and fam'd Coloſſus high,
And Olimpius greeting the azure ſky.

By

* And ſo ſoon as ever the day began to break, Noah ſtood up towards the body of Adam; and before the Lord, he and his ſons, Shem, Ham, and Japheth, and Noah, prayed, &c. And the women anſwered, from another part of the ark, AMEN, LORD.—Vide Caten. Arab. C. XXV. fol. 56. b.

X.

By God's command and free maſonry,
The temple had moſt exact ſymmetry;
In orders rais'd by Hyram's mighty art,
From nature's rude materials ſtart;
The world's wonders before were deem'd but ſeven,
Till this grand fabric made them even.

XI.

Come charge, charge your glaſſes ſpeedily,
To all true brothers ſkilled in maſonry;
Likewiſe the king, long happy may he reign,
Old England's glory to maintain;
In order ſtand, you know the antient charge,
Pay due reſpect to mighty George.

L.

An ODE.

I.

Wake the lute and quivering ſtrings,
Myſtic Truths Urania brings;
Friendly viſitant to thee,
We owe the depths of maſonry:
Faireſt of the virgin choir,
Warbling to the golden lyre;
Hail divine Urania hail.

II.

Here in friendſhip's ſacred bower,
Thy downy wing'd and ſmiling hour;
Mirth invites, and ſocial ſong,
Nameleſs myſteries among:
Crown the bowl and fill the glaſs,
To ev'ry virtue, ev'ry grace;
To the brotherhood reſound
Health, and let it thrice go round.

III.

We reſtore the times of old,
The blooming glorious age of gold;
As the new creation free,
Bleſt with gay Euphroſine:
We with god-like ſcience talk,
And with fair Aſtrea walk;
Innocence adorns the day,
Brighter than the ſmiles of May.

IV.

Pour the roſy wine again,
Wake a louder, louder ſtrain;
Rapid Zephyrs, as ye fly,
Waft our voices to the ſky;
While we celebrate the nine,
And the wonders of the trine.
While the angels ſing above,
As we below, of peace and love.

LI. SONG.

By Brother E—— P——

I.

Hail, ſacred art, by heav'n deſign'd
A gracious bleſſing for all mankind;
Peace, joy, and love, thou doſt beſtow,
On us thy votaries below.

II.

Bright wiſdom's Footſteps here we trace,
From Solomon that prince of peace;
Whoſe glorious maxims we ſtill hold,
More precious than rich Ophyr's gold.

III.

His heav'nly proverbs to us tell,
How we on earth ſhould ever dwell;
In harmony and ſocial love,
To emulate the bleſt above.

IV.

Now having wiſdom for our guide,
By its ſweet precepts we'll abide;
Envy and hatred we'll diſpel,
No wrathful fool with us ſhall dwell.

V.

Vain, empty grandeur ſhall not find
Its dwelling in a maſon's mind;
A maſon who is true and wiſe,
Its glitt'ring pomp always deſpiſe.

Hu-

VI.

Humility, love, joy, and peace,
Within his mind ſhall find their place;
Virtue and Wiſdom thus combin'd,
Shall decorate the maſon's mind.

LII. SONG.

Tune. GOD ſave the KING.

I.

Hail! Maſonry divine.
Glory of ages ſhine,
Long may'ſt thou hold;
Where-e'er thy lodges ſtand,
May they have great command,
And always grace the land,
Thou art divine.

II.

Great fabrics ſtill ariſe,
And touch the azure ſkies,
Great are thy ſchemes;
Thy noble orders are
Matchleſs beyond compare,
No art with thee can ſhare,
Thou art divine.

III.

Hiram the architect,
Did all the craft direct,
How they ſhould build;
Solomon, great Iſrael's king,
Did mighty bleſſings bring,
And left us room to ſing,
Hail! royal ART.

LIII. SONG.

I.

Let maſons be merry each night when they meet,
And always each other moſt lovingly greet,
Let envy and diſcord be ſunk in the deep
By ſuch as are able great ſecrets to keep,
Let all the world gaze on our art with ſurpriſe,
They're all in the dark till we open their eyes.

II.

Whoever is known to act on the ſquare,
And likewiſe well ſkill'd in our ſecrets rare
Are always reſpected whether wealthy or poor,
And ne'er yet was careleſs of matters that's pure.
Their Actions are bright and their lives ſpent in love,
At length will be happy in the grand lodge above.

III.

We are brothers to princes and fellows to kings,
Our fame thro' the world continually rings;
As we lovingly meet, ſo we lovingly part,
No maſon did ever bear malice at heart;
The fool that's conceited we'll never deſpiſe,
Let him come to the lodge and we'll make him more wiſe.

The

IV.

The ſanctum ſanctorum by maſons was fram'd,
And all the fine works which the temple contain'd,
By Hiram's contrivance, the pride of my ſong,
The noiſe of a tool was not heard along;
And the number of maſons that round it did move,
By him were directed, inſpir'd from above.

LIV. SONG.

I.

If unity be good in every degree,
What can be compar'd to that of maſonry;
In unity we meet, and in unity we part;
Let every maſon chorus hail mighty art,
Let every &c.

II.

The vulgar often murmurs at our noble art
Becauſe the great arcanum we don't to them impart;
In ignorance let them live and in ignorance let them die,
Be ſilent and ſecret let every maſon cry,
Be ſilent &c.

III.

Let a bumper be crown'd unto the art of maſonry,
And to each jovial brother that is a Maſon free;
We act upon the ſquare, on the level we'll depart,
Let every maſon ſing, hail glorious art.
Let every &c.

LV. SONG.

Tune. The Miller of Mansfield.

How happy a Maſon whoſe boſom ſtill flows
With Friendſhip, and ever moſt cheerfully goes;
The effects of the myſteries log'd in his breaſt,
Myſteries rever'd and by princes poſſeſs'd
Our friends and our bottle we beſt can enjoy,
No rancour or envy our quiet annoy,
Our plum, line, and compaſs, our ſquare and our tools
Direct all our actions in virtues fair rules.

II.

To Mars and to Venus we're equally true,
Our Hearts can enliven, our arms can ſubdue;
Let the enemy tell, and the Ladies declare
No claſs or profeſſion with maſons compare;
To give a fond luſtre we ne'er need a creſt,
Since honour and virtue remain in our breaſt,
We'll charm the rude world when we clap, laugh and ſing,
If ſo happy a maſon, ſay who'd be a king.

LVI. SONG.

I.

When maſonry by heavn's deſign
Did enter firſt into great Hiram's brain,
A choir of angels did rejoice,
And this chorus ſung united voice,

Hail!

Hail! you happy, happy ſons that be Brothers of free-maſonry.

II.

Great Hiram he did then repair
And went to work with rule and ſquare,
With plum and level to his eternal fame
He did the glorious temple frame,
Hail you happy, &c.

III.

When Solomon beheld the fame,
He then ſet forth great Hiram's fame:
Oh! excellent maſon! he in ſurprize did ſay,
Above all arts you bear the ſway,
Hail you happy, &c.

IV.

Now to great Hiram's memory
Let's fill a glaſs moſt chearfully,
St. John (including) who the light did bring,
And likewiſe GEORGE our gracious king,
Hail you happy, &c.

V.

Next charge unto our maſter grand
And to each lovely fair-one round the land,
Ourſelves including, ſo let the health go round
With a clap to make the lodge reſound.
Hail &c.

LVII. SONG.

Tune. Hail Maſonry, &c.

Let worthy brethren all combine
For to adorn our myſtic art,

So

So as the craft may ever ſhine
And cheer each faithful brother's heart;
Then brethren all in chorus ſing,
Proſper the craft and bleſs the king,

II.

We level'd, plum'd and ſquar'd, a right
The five noble orders upright ſtands,
Wiſdom and ſtrength, with beauty's height,
The wonder of the world commands;
Then brethren all &c.

III.

Ye fools and cowans all who plot
For to obtain our myſtery,
Ye ſtrive in vain attempt it not
Such creatures never ſhall be free;
Then brethren all &c.

IV.

The wiſe, the noble, good, and great,
Can only be accepted here;
The knave or fool, tho' deck'd in ſtate,
Shall ne'er approach the maſter's chair,
Then brethren all &c.

V.

Now fill your glaſſes, charge them high,
Let our grand maſters health go round;
And let each here o'er-flow with joy,
And love and unity abound.
Then brethren all &c.

LVIII. SONG.

Tune. The Firſt of Auguſt.

I.

With cordial hearts lets drink a health,
To ev'ry faithful brother;
Whoſe candid hearts, ſecure whilſt breath,
Are faithful to each other:
Whoſe precious jewels are ſo rare,
Likewiſe their hearts ſo framed are,
And level'd with the trueſt ſquare,
That nature can diſcover.

II.

As great a man as in this land,
Or in any other nation,
Wou'd take a brother by the hand,
And greet him in his ſtation:
Neither king nor prince, tho' e'er ſo great,
Or any emperor of ſtate,
But with great candour wou'd relate,
To every faithful brother;

III.

The world ſhall ſtill remain in pain,
And at our ſecrets wonder;
No cowan ſhall it e'er obtain,
Tho' all their lives they ponder:
Still aiming at the chiefeſt white,
In which free-maſons take delight,
They never can obtain the light,
Tho' they ſpend their lives in wonder.

IV.

King Solomon, the great and wiſe,
He was a faithful brother;
Free-maſonry wou'd not deſpiſe,
No ſecrets he'd diſcover:
But he was always frank and free,
Profeſſing ſuch ſincerity,
To all of that fraternity,
He lov'd them 'bove all other.

V.

Come, let us build on firm ground,
Still aiding of each other;
And lay a foundation that's moſt ſound,
That no arts-man can diſcover:
Nor ever ſhall revealed be,
But to bright men in maſonry,
Here is to them where-e'r they be,
I'm their faithful brother.

VI.

Come let us join our hearts and hands,
In this moſt glorious manner;
And to each other firmly ſtand,
Under king George's banner:
That God may bleſs him ſtill I pray,
And over his enemies bear the ſway,
And for ever win the day,
And crown his days with honour.

LIX. SONG.

I.

Let maſons ever live in love,
Let harmony their bleſſings prove,
And ſacred lodge on Earth the place,
Where freedom ſmiles in every face.

CHORUS.

Live free-maſons, free-maſons live and love,
And ſhew that your types are from above.

II.

Behold the world all in amaze,
Each curious eye with tranſport gaze,
They look, they like, they wiſh to be,
What none can gain, except he's free.
Chor. Live free-maſon's &c.

III.

Then let each brother charge full high,
And let us drink the memory,
Of Hiram and king Solomon,
Whoſe fame has thro' all ages run.
Chor. Live free-maſons, &c.

LX. SONG.

By Brother Robert Hall.

Tune. Rule Britannia.

I.

When Maſonry by heav'n's decree,
Aroſe from father Adam's brain,
This, this was the charter of the fraternity,
And ſecrecy ſhall guard the ſame.

CHORUS.

Hail maſonry, for ever, ever may thou be,
To all but us a myſtery.

II.

The brethren all upright and juſt,
Shall ever act upon the ſquare;
Until that the world diſſolves to duſt,
The needy ſhall their bounty ſhare.
Chor. Hail maſonry, &c.

III.

True moral men, ſincere and free,
Shall wiſdom's dictates ſtill impart,
And mirth and joy, and true ſocial unity,
Shall bleſs thoſe peaceful ſons of art.
Chor. Hail maſonry, &c.

The

IV.

The cowan and the crafty knave,
Shall never tread the ſacred ground,
The griping miſer, traitor, nor the abject ſlave,
In maſons lodge ſhall ne'er be found.
Chor. Hail maſonry, &c.

V.

But if he's honeſt, juſt and true,
His life and actions clear and bright;
Report him, and prepare him, and inveſt him too,
For he's the man ſhall ſee the light.
Chor. Hail maſonry, &c.

LXI.

A NEW SONG.

By the foregoing Hand.

I.

When Sol, aſcending from the eaſt,
Projects his rays into the weſt,
And darkneſs turns to light:
With upright emblem wiſdom ſtands,
And quickly he does give commands,
To ſee the lodge til'd right.

II.

In ſolemn form he then declares,
The lodge is open, work prepares,

No greater joys we aſk,
Attentive then to work we fall,
Obedient to our maſter all,
Each to perform his taſk.

III.

We ſquare our deeds by virtues plan,
And dignify each honeſt man,
With ſecrets ſtill unknown,
The monarch, ſtateſman, and divine,
Unite in maſons grand deſign,
And in the lodge have ſhone.

IV.

But when the bright meridian ſun,
One half his daily courſe has run,
And makes the ſhorteſt ſhade,
We then erect fair beauty's pile,
Which makes each maſon ſing and ſmile,
For virtue's joys ne'er fade.

V.

Our glaſſes charg'd in ſolemn ſtate,
We drink to all the good and great,
That love free-maſonry;
We toaſt our brethren, friends and wives,
And thus we maſons always ſtrive,
In friendſhip to agree.

VI.

In mirth we ſpend the time of eaſt,
'Till Sol declines into the weſt.

Then

Then ſtrength performs his part;
And to compleat the maſons life,
Each haſtes unto his girl or wife,
To propagate the art.

LXII.

A NEW MASONS SONG.

I.

As long as our coaſt does with whiteneſs appear,
Still maſons ſtand foremoſt in verſe;
Whilſt harmony, friendſhip and joys are held dear,
New bands ſhall our praiſes rehearſe.

CHORUS.

Though lodges leſs favoured, leſs happy decay,
Deſtroyed by old time as it runs;
Tho' Albions, Gregorians and Bucks fade away,
Still Maſons ſhall live in their ſons.

II.

If envy attempts our ſucceſs to impede,
United we will trample her down:
If faction ſhould threaten, we'll ſhew we'er agreed,
And diſcord ſhall own we are one.
Chor. Tho' lodges &c.

III.

Whilſt with ardour we glow, this our Order to raiſe,
Promoting its wellfare and peace:
Old maſons return, our endeavours to praiſe,
And new ones confirm the increaſe.
Chor. Tho' lodges &c.

Go on, cries our parents, for time is your friend,
Its flight ſhall increaſe your renown,
And mirth ſhall your gueſt be, and Bacchus attend,
And joy all your meetings ſhall crown.
Chor. Tho' lodges, &c.

LXIII. SONG.

I.

Ariſe gentle Muſe, who with wiſdom inſpires,
Each boſom that's ardent in virtuous deſires;
For from glorious actions, the bliſs that accrues,
Is the worth all admire, and each maſon purſues.

CHORUS.

Hence harmony ſprings, 'tis the cement of love,
Fair freedom on earth, and bright union above.

II.

Indignant around us, tho' diſcord is ſeen,
And malice full loaded, venomous ſpleen;
To the one we'll be deaf, to the other be blind,
For virtue will always give ſtrength to the mind.
Hence harmony ſprings, &c.

III.

Thus beauty's gay charms, with luſtre divine,
Our art ſhall adorn, which for ever will ſhine,
'Till time circling round ſhall unfold the great truth,
Which thus has united the ſage and the youth.
Hence harmony ſprings, &c.

LXIV. SONG

LXIV. SONG.

I.

Begin, O ye Muſes, a free maſon's ſtrain;
Let the numbers be gentle, and eaſy, and plain,
While thus in concert we joyfully ſing,
Each brother's happy and bleſt as a king,
For princes diſdain not companions to be,
With a man that's own'd for a maſon and free.

II.

Why ſeek the beſt nobles our myſtery to know,
And rather ſing here than ſip tea with a beau;
The notes of knowledge more powerfully call,
Than fav'rite at court, or toaſt at a ball;
For truth's ſake a lord is of equal degree,
With a man that is own'd for a maſon and free.

III.

Great Jove firſt lighted the glorious flame,
Of ſcience that ſages free maſonry name,
From Adam it paſt to the patriarchs old,
And wiſeſt of kings did prefer it to gold;
Hiram of Tyre join'd with him to be,
Of the number of thoſe that were maſons and free.

IV.

The Gregs and the Gallics *, and others they ſay,
Have ſet up their lodges and mimic our way,

* See the Note to the 36th Song.

But

But frogs claim a curſe when they croak from the fen,
And monkies a kick when they imitate men;
In vain ſhallow mortals the rivals would be,
To the man that is own'd for a maſon and free.

V.

The wiſdom of Greece and old Rome we explore,
Nay paſs to the learn'd of the Memphian ſhore,
What ſecrets Euphrates and Tygres have known,
And Paleſtine gather'd, are here made our own;
Well may the world wonder what ſtrange things we ſee,
With the man that is known a free maſon to be.

VI.

Tho' women from lodges are always debar'd,
Dear fair ones repent not, nor cenſure too hard,
No rivals are here, no not even in glaſs,
Where fribles ſo doat on the ſhade of an aſs,
Your own deareſt pictures, our hearts could you ſee,
Would be found in the boſom of him that is free.

VII.

The graces and virtue here mutually join,
And ſcience and knowledge the ſoul to refine:
Bleſs'd concord and eagle high truth hover round,
And face to face friendſhip cries ſee the bowl crown'd;
Here's a health, let it paſs with the number of three,
To him that is known a good maſon and free.

LXV. SONG.

I.

When a lodge of free maſons are cloath'd in their aprons
In order to make a new brother,
With firm hearts and clean hands they repair to their ſtands,
And juſtly ſupport one another.

II.

Truſty brother take care, of Eve's droppers beware,
'Tis a juſt and a ſolemn occaſion;
Give the word and the blow, that workmen may know
You are going to make a free maſon.

III.

The maſter ſtands due, and his officers too,
While craftſmen are plying their ſtation;
The deacons doth ſtand right for the command
Of a free and an accepted maſon.

IV.

Now traverſe your ground, as in duty you're bound,
And revere the moſt ſacred oration,
That leads to the way, and proves the firſt ray,
Of the light of an accepted maſon.

V.

Here's tokens and ſigns, with problems and lines,
And room too for deep ſpeculation;
Here virtue and truth, are taught to the youth,
When firſt he is bound to a maſon.

VI.

Hieroglyphicks bright, and light reverts light,
On the rules and tools of vocation;
We work and we ſing, the craft and the king,
'Tis both duty and choice in a maſon.

VII.

What's ſaid or is done, is here truly laid down,
In form of our high inſtallation,
Yet I challenge all men to know what I mean,
Unleſs he's an accepted maſon.

VIII.

The ladies claim right to come into our light,
Since the apron they ſay is their bearing;
Can they ſubject their will, and keep their tongues ſtill,
And let talking be chang'd into hearing.

IX.

This difficult taſk is the leaſt we can aſk
To ſecure us on ſundry occaſions,
When with this they comply, our utmoſt we'll try
To raiſe lodges for lady free maſons.

X.

'Till this can be done, muſt each brother be mum,
Tho' the fair one ſhou'd wheedle and teaze on,
Be juſt true and kind, but ſtill bear in mind,
At all times, that you are a free maſon.

An ODE.

By Brother Edward Fenner.

With grateful hearts your voices raiſe,
To ſound the great Creator's praiſe,
Who by his word diſpell'd the night,
And form'd the radiant beams of light;
Who fram'd the heav'ns, the earth, the ſkies,
And bid the wondrous fabric riſe,
Who view'd his work and found it juſt,
And then created man from duſt.

Happy in Eden was he laid,
Nor did he go aſtray
Till, by the ſerpent, Eve betray'd,
Firſt fell and led the way.

But falling from this happy plain,
Subject to various wants and pain,
Labour and art muſt now provide,
What Eden freely once ſupply'd;
Some learn'd to till th' unwilling ground;
Some bid the well-ſtrung harp to ſound;
Each different arts purſued and taught,
Till to perfection each was brought.

Maſons purſue the truth divine,
We cannot go aſtray,
Since three great lights conjointly ſhine
To point us out the way.

Zion appears, rejoice, rejoice,
Exult, and hear, obey the voice
Of mercy and enlightening grace,
Recalling us to Eden's place;
With faith believe, and hope purſue,
And mercy ſtill for mercy ſhew;
Proclaim aloud, with grateful theme,
The great Redeemer's bleſſed name;
The eaſtern ſtar now ſhews us light,
Let us not go aſtray;
Let faith, hope, charity unite
To chear the gladſome way.

LXVI. SONG.

I.

Ye thrice happy few,
Whoſe hearts have been true;
In concord and unity found,
Let's ſing and rejoice,
And unite ev'ry voice,
To ſend the gay chorus around, to ſend the gay chorus around.

CHORUS.

For like pillars we ſtand,
An immovable band,
Cemented by powers from above,
Then freely let's paſs
The generous glaſs,
To maſonry, friendſhip and love, to maſonry, friendſhip and love.

The

II.

The grand architect,
Whoſe word did erect,
Eternity, meaſure, and ſpace,
Firſt laid the fair plan,
On which we began,
Cement of harmony and place, cement of harmony and place.
Cho. For like pillars we ſtand, &c.

III.

Whoſe firmneſs of hearts,
Fair treaſure of arts,
To the eyes of the vulgar unknown,
Whoſe luſtre can beam,
New dignity and fame,
On the pulpit, the bar, or the throne. Enchore.
Cho. For like pillars we ſtand, &c.

IV.

Indiſſoluble bands,
Our hearts and our hands,
In ſocial benevolence bind;
For true to his cauſe,
By immutable laws,
A maſon's a friend to mankind. Enchore.
Cho. For like pillars we ſtand, &c.

V.

Let joy flow around,
And peace olive bound,

Preſide

Preſide at our myſtical rites,
Whoſe candour maintains
Our auſpicious domains,
And freedom with order unites. Enchore.
Cho. For like pillars we ſtand, &c.

VI.

Nor let the dear maid,
Our myſteries dread,
Nor think them repugnant to love;
To beauty we bend,
And her Empire defend,
Her empire deriv'd from above. Enchore.
Cho. For like pillars we ſtand, &c.

VII.

Then let's all unite,
Sincere and upright,
On the level of virtue to ſtand;
No mortals can be,
More happy than we,
With a brother and friend in each hand.
Cho. For like pillars we ſtand, &c.

LXVII. SONG.

I.

Whoever wants wiſdom, muſt with ſome delight,
Read, ponder, and pore, noon, morning, and night;
Muſt turn over volumes of gigantic ſize,
Enlighten his mind, tho' he puts out his eyes.
Derry down, &c.

If

II.

If a General wou'd know how to muſter his men,
By thouſands, by hundreds, by fifties, by ten;
Or level his Siege on high caſtle or town,
He muſt borrow his precepts from men of renown.
Derry down, &c.

III.

Wou'd a wry-fac'd phyſician or parſon excel,
In preaching or giving a ſanctified ſpell;
He firſt muſt read Galen and Tillotſon thro'
E'er he gets credentials or buſineſs to do.
Derry down, &c.

IV.

But theſe are all follies, free-maſons can prove,
In the lodge they find knowledge, fair virtue and love;
Without deaf'ning their ears, without blinding their eyes,
They find the compendious way to be wiſe.
Derry down, &c.

LXVIII. SONG.

I.

Come ye elves that be,
Come follow, follow me;
All you that guards have been Without, and ſerv'd within:
Sing, let joy thro' us reſound,
For all this lodge is ſacred ground.

II.

Guides too, that fairies are,
Come five by five prepare :
Come bring freſh oil with ſpeed,
Your dying lamps to feed :
All trim'd in new and glitt'ring light,
To welcome garments that are white.

III.

Come ſeraphs too, that be
Bright rulers, three by three ;
Attend on me your queen,
Two handmaids led between :
Whilſt all around this health I name,
Shall make the hollow ſounds proclaim.

IV.

Whilſt ſylvans and ſylvan loves,
O'er mountains and in groves ;
With brighter gems and ſprightly dames,
Of fountains and of flames :
With joyful noiſe our hands and feet,
Shall echo, and the ſound repeat.

V.

Whilſt we who ſing and love,
And live in ſprings above;
Deſcend, deſcend, do we,
With maſons to be free :
Where ſprings of wine revive each face,
And ſtreams of milk flow round the place.

VI.

Whilſt cherubs guard the door,
With flaming ſword before;
We thro' the key-hole creep,
And there unſeen we peep:
O'er all their jewels ſkip and leap,
And trip it, trip it, ſtep by ſtep.

VII.

Or as upon the green,
We Fairies turn unſeen
So here we make a ring,
While merry maſons ſing:
Around their crowns we whirl apace,
And not one ſingle hair miſplace.

VIII.

And down from thence we jump,
All with a ſilent thump;
None hear our feet rebound,
Round, round the table, round:
Nor ſees us whilſt we nimbly paſs,
Thrice round the rim of ev'ry glaſs.

IX.

But if any crumbs withal,
Down from their table fall;
With greedy mirth we eat,
No honey is ſo ſweet:
And when they drop it from their thumb,
We catch it ſupernaculum.

X.

Now as for maſonry,
Altho' we are not free;
In lodges we have been,
And all their Signs have ſeen:
Yet ſuch love to the craft we bear,
Their ſecrets we will ne'er declare.

A PROLOGUE.

Spoken by Mr. Griffith, at the Theatre-Royal, &c.

IF to delight and humanize the mind,
The ſavage world in ſocial ties to bind;
To make the moral virtues all appear
Improv'd and uſeful, ſoften'd from ſevere;
If theſe demand the tribute of your praiſe,
The teacher's honour or the poet's lays;
How do we view 'em all compris'd in Thee,
Thrice honour'd and myſterious MASONRY;
By Thee erected, ſpacious domes ariſe,
And ſpires aſcending glittering in the ſkies;
The word'rous whole by heav'nly art is crown'd,
And order in diverſity is found;
Thro' ſuch a length of ages, ſtill how fair,
How bright, how blooming do thy looks appear;

And ſtill ſhall bloom. —Time, as it glides away.
Fears for its own, before thine ſhall decay ;
The uſe of accents from thy aid is thrown,
Thou form'ſt a ſilent language of thy own :
Diſdain'ſt that records ſhould contain thy art,
And only liv'ſt within the faithful heart.——
Behold where kings and a long ſhining train
Of garter'd heroes wait upon thy reign,
And boaſt no honour but a maſon's name.
Still in the dark let the unknowing ſtray ;
No matter what they judge, or what they ſay ;
Still may thy myſtic ſecrets be conceal'd,
And only to a brother be reveal'd.

A PROLOGUE.

As a wild Rake that courts a virgin fair,
And tries in vain her virtue to enſnare :
Tho' what he calls his heav'n he may obtain
By putting on the matrimonial chain.
At length enrag'd to find ſhe ſtill is chaſte
Her modeſt fame maliciouſly would blaſt ;
So ſome at our fraternity do rail,
Becauſe our ſecrets we ſo well conceal,
And curſe the ſentry with the flaming ſword,
That keeps eve-droppers from the maſon word ;
Tho' rightly introduc'd all true men may Obtain the ſecret in a lawful way,
They'd have us counter to our honour run ;
Do what they muſt blame us for when done ;

And when they find their teazing will not do,
Blinded with anger, heighth of folly ſhow,
By railing at the thing they do not know.
Not ſo the aſſembly of the Scottiſh kirk,
Their wiſdoms went a wiſer way to work:
When they were told that maſons practis'd charms,
Invok'd the dee'l, and rais'd tempeſtuous ſtorms,
Two of their body prudently they ſent
To learn what cou'd by maſonry be meant.
Admitted to the lodge and treated well,
At their return the aſſembly hop'd they'd tell.
We ſay nea mere than this (they both reply'd)
Do what we've done and ye'll be ſatisfy'd.

A PROLOGUE.

As ſome crack'd chymiſt of projecting brain,
Much for diſcovery, but more for gain;
With toil, inceſſant labours, puffs and blows
In ſearch of ſomething nature won't diſcloſe.
At length his crucibles and meaſures broke,
His fancy'd gain evaporate in ſmoke.
So ſome preſumptuous ſtill attempt to trace
The guarded ſymbol of our ancient race,
Enwrapp'd in venerable gloom it lies,
And mocks all ſight but of a maſon's eyes;
Like the fam'd ſtream enriching Egypt's ſhore,
All feel its uſe — but few its ſource explore.

All

All ages ſtill muſt owe, and every land
Their pride and ſafety to the maſons hand.
Whether for gorgeous domes renown'd afar,
Or ramparts ſtrong to ſtem the rage of war;
All we behold in earth or circling air,
Proclaims the power of compaſs's and ſquare.
The heaven-taught ſcience queen of arts appears,
Eludes the ruſt of time, and waſte of years.
Thro' form and matter are her laws diſplay'd,
Her rule's the ſame by which the world was made.
Whatever virtue grace the ſocial name,
Thoſe we profeſs, on thoſe we found our fame;
Wiſely the lodge looks down on tinſel ſtate,
Where only to be good, is to be great.
Such ſouls by inſtinct to each other turn,
Demand alliance, and in friendſhip burn;
No ſhallow ſchemes, no ſtratagems nor arts,
Can break the cement that unites their hearts.
Then let pale envy, rage, and every name
Of fools miſtaking infamy for fame;
Such have all countries and all ages borne,
And ſuch all countries and all ages ſcorn;
Glorious the temple of the ſylvan queen,
Pride of the world at Epheſus was ſeen
A witleſs wretch the Prichard of thoſe days,
Stranger to virtue and unknown to praiſe,
Crooked of ſoul and fond of any name,
Conſign'd the noble monument to flame,
Vain madman! if ſo thinking to deſtroy
The Art which cannot but with nature die.

Still with the craft, ſtill ſhall his name ſurvive,
And in our glory his diſgrace ſhall live;
While his cowans no more admittance gain
Than Epheraimites at Jordan's paſſage ſlain.

A PROLOGUE.

You've ſeen me oft in gold and Ermin dreſt,
And wearing ſhort liv'd honours on my breaſt;
But now the honourable badge I wear
Gives an indelible high character:
And thus by our grand maſter am I ſent
To tell you what by maſonry is meant.
If all the ſocial virtues of the mind;
If an extenſive love to all mankind;
If hoſpitable welcome to a gueſt,
And ſpeedy charity to the diſtreſs'd;
If due regard to liberty and laws,
Zeal for our king and for our country's cauſe;
If theſe are principles deſerving fame,
Let MASONS then enjoy the praiſe they claim:
Nay more, though war deſtroys what maſons build,
E'er to a peace inglorious we would yield;
Our ſquares and trowels into ſwords we'll turn,
And make our foes the wars they menace mourn;
For their contempt we'll no vain boaſter ſpare,
Unleſs by chance we meet a MASON there.

Spoken

Spoken by a BROTHER.

While others ſing of wars and martial feats,
Of bloody battles and of fam'd retreats;
A more noble ſubject ſhall my fancy raiſe,
And MASONRY alone ſhall claim my praiſe:
Hail! Maſonry, thou royal art divine,
Blameleſs may I approach thy ſacred ſhrine;
Thy radiant beauties let me there admire,
And warm my heart with thy celeſtial fire:
Ye wilful blind, ſeek not your own diſgrace,
Be ſure you come not near the hallowed place,
For fear too late your raſhneſs you deplore,
And terrors feel by you unthought before.
With joy my faithful brethren here I ſee
Joining their hearts in love and unity;
Still ſtriving each other to excel
In ſocial virtues and in doing well:
No party jars, no politic debate,
Which often wrath excites, and feuds create;
No impious talk, no fleering jeſts nor brawls,
Was ever heard within our peaceful walls,
Here in harmonious concert friendly join
The Prince, the Soldier, Tradeſman, and Divine,
And to each other mutual help afford;
The honeſt farmer, and the noble lord.
Freedom and mirth attend the cheerful bowl,
Refreſh the ſpirits, and enlarge the ſoul;
The cordial we with moderation uſe,
For temperance admits of no abuſe;

Pru-

Prudence we praiſe and fortitude commend,
To juſtice always and her friends a friend :
The ſcoffing tribe the ſhame of Adam's race,
Deride thoſe myſteries which they cannot trace;
Profane ſolemnities they never ſaw,
And lying libels to them are a law;
The book of maſonry they may in vain explore,
And turn myſterious pages o'er and o'er;
Hoping the great Arcanum to attain,
But endleſs their toil, and fruitleſs all their pain:
They may as well for heat to Greenland go,
Or in the torrid regions ſeek for ſnow;
The royal craft the ſcoffing tribe deſpiſe,
And veils their ſecrets from unlawful eyes.

An EPILOGUE.

Spoken by Mrs. Thurmond, a Maſon's Wife.

With what malicious joy, e'er I knew better,
Have I been wont the maſons to be-ſpatter;
How greedily have I believ'd each lie
Contriv'd againſt that fam'd ſociety;
With many more complain'd—'twas very hard,
Women ſhould from their ſecrets be debar'd,

When kings and ſtateſmen to our ſex reveal
Important buſineſs which they ſhould conceal,
That beauteous ladies by their ſparks ador'd
Never cou'd wheedle out the maſon's word;
And oft their favours have beſtow'd in vain,
Nor cou'd one ſecret for another gain:
I thought unable to explain the matter,
Each maſon ſure muſt be a woman hater:
With ſudden fear and diſmal horror ſtruck,
I heard my ſpouſe was to ſubſcribe the book,
By all our loves I beg'd he would forbear;
Upon my knees I wept and tore my hair:
But when I found him fixt, how I behav'd,
I thought him loſt, and like a fury rav'd,
Believ'd he would for ever be undone
By ſome ſtrange operation undergone.
When he came back I found a change 'tis true,
But ſuch a change as did his youth renew:
With roſy cheeks and ſmiling grace he came,
And ſparkling eyes that ſpoke a bridegroom's flame.
Ye married ladies 'tis a happy life,
Believe me, that of a freemaſon's wife.
Tho' they conceal the ſecrets of their friends,
In love and truth they make us full amends.

Spoken by Mrs. BELLAMY.

Well, here I'm come to let you know my thoughts;
Nay, ben't alarm'd, I'll not attack your faults;
Alike be ſafe, the cuckold and the wit,
The cuckold-maker and the ſolemn cit.
I'm in good humour and am come to prattle,
Han't I a head well turn'd, d'ye think, to rattle,
But to clear up the point and to be free,
What think you is my ſubject, MASONRY:
Tho' I'm afraid as Lawyers caſes clear
My learn'd debate will leave you as you were;
But I'm a woman—and when I ſay that,
You know we'll talk—altho' we know not what:
What think you ladies e'nt it very hard,
That we ſhould from this ſecret be debar'd.
How comes it that the ſofter hour of love,
To wheedle out this ſecret fruitleſs prove;
For we can wheedle when we hope to move.
What can it mean, why all this mighty pother,
Theſe myſtic ſigns and ſolemn calling, brother;
That we are qualify'd in ſigns are known,
We can keep ſecrets too, but they're our own.
When my good man went firſt to be a maſon,
Tho' I reſolv'd to put the ſmoother face on;
Yet to ſpeak truly, I began to fear
He muſt ſome dreadful operation bear;
But he return'd, to ſatisfy each doubt,
And brought home ev'ry thing he carried out:

Nay, came improv'd, for on his face appear'd
A pleaſing ſmile that ev'ry ſcruple clear'd.
Such added complaiſance, ſo much good-nature,
So much, ſo ſtrangely alter'd for the better;
That to increaſe the mutual dear delight!
Wou'd he were made a maſon ev'ry night.

EPILOGUE.

Spoken by Mrs. HORTON.

Where are theſe Hydra's, let me vent my ſpleen;
Are theſe free-maſons? Bleſs me! theſe are men!
And young and briſk too: I expected monſters,
Brutes more prodigious than Italian ſongſters.
Lord, how report will lie, how vain's this pother;
Theſe look like ſparks who only love each other. [Ironically
Let eaſy faiths on ſuch groſs tales rely,
'Tis falſe by rules of phyſiognomy,
I'll ne'er believe it, poz, unleſs I try.
In proper time and place, there's little doubt
But one might find their wond'rous ſecrets out;
I ſhrewdly gueſs, egad, for all their ſhyneſs,
They'd render ſigns and tokens too of kindneſs;
If any truth in what I here obſerve is,
They'll quit ten brothers for one ſiſter's ſervice:
But hold with fancy, whether haſt thou ſtray'd?
Where man's concern'd, alas, how frail's a maid:

I'm

I'm come to ſtorm, to ſcold, to rail, to rate,
And ſee the accuſer's turn'd the advocate.
Say to what merits might I not pretend,
Who, tho' no ſiſter, do yet prove your friend:
Wou'd beauty thus but in your cauſe appear,
'Twere ſomething, Sirs, to be accepted there: [Shews the boxes
Ladies, be gracious to the myſtic arts,
And kindly take the gen'rous maſons parts;
Let no loquacious fop your joys partake,
He ſues for telling, not for kiſſing ſake:
Firm to their truſt, the faithful craft conceal;
They cry no roaſt-meat, fare they ne'er ſo well;
No tell-tale ſneer ſhall raiſe the conſcious bluſh,
The loyal brother's word is always——huſh.
What tho' they quote old Solomon's decree,
And vainly boaſt that thro' the world they're free;
With eaſe you'll humble the preſumptuous braves,
One kind regard makes all theſe freemen ſlaves.

An EPILOGUE.

Well, heavens be prais'd, the mighty ſecrets's out;
The ſecret that has made ſo ſtrange a rout:
This moment I was taught behind the ſcenes,
That every word, and ſign, and token means;
A charming ſecret, but I muſt conceal it
If time, at nine months end, does not reveal it:
What monſtrous horrid lies do ſome folks tell us,
Why maſons, ladies, are quite clever fellows;

They're

They're lovers of our Sex, as I can witneſs,
And ne'er act contrary to * mortal fitneſs:
If any of ye doubt it, try the maſons,
They'll not deceive your largeſt expectations;
Let no miſgrounded apprehenſions ſeize ye,
They won't do any thing that can diſpleaſe ye;
They're able workmen, and compleatly ſkill'd in
The trueſt arts and myſteries of building;
They'll build up families, and, as moſt fit is,
Not only will erect, but people cities;
They'll fill as well as fabricate your houſes,
And propagate a race of ſtrong-built ſpouſes.
If ſuch their gifts; ſuch, ladies, is their merit,
So great their ſkill, and ſtrength, and life, and ſpirit;
What female heart can be ſo very hard,
As to refuſe them their deſerv'd reward.

Once on a time (as heathen ſtory ſay)
Two maſon-gods to Troy town took their way:
Arriv'd, and hir'd to work, to work they fell;
Hard was their taſk, but executed well:
With more than human ſtrength, theſe heav'nly powers,
Rais'd the impregnable Dardanian towers;
Thoſe towers which long ſecur'd the Trojan dames,
From Grecian raviſhers, and Grecian flames:
Gratis they did it, whatſoe'r was done;
Wrong'd of their pay by king Laomedon:
Baſe ſordid ſoul, of princes the diſgrace;
But heav'n his guilt aveng'd upon his race:

* Alluding to CHUBB's Eſſay—ſo intitled.

Moſt

Moſt juſtly did his Troy at length expire,
Reduc'd to aſhes by vindictive fire.
Ladies, this ſtory's written for your learning;
Let Troy's example fright you all from burning;
Let it, this truth in every breaſt inſpire,
That every workman's worthy of his hire;
But ſure ſuch virtue in the preſent age is,
None will defraud the brethren of their wages;
None will tranſgreſs the laws of common ſenſe,
Which give both ſexes due benevolence:
A maſon's full reward then do not grudge,
Since every maſon is your humble drudge.

ORATORIO,

As it was performed for the Benefit of ſick and diſtreſs'd

FREE-MASONS.

Dramatis Perſonæ.

Solomon, the Grand-Maſter.
High Prieſt.
Hiram, the Workman.
Uriel, Angel of the Sun.
Sheba, Queen of the South.
Chorus of Prieſts and Nobles.

SOLOMON.

Recitative.

Conven'd we're met,—chief Oracle of heav'n,
To whom the ſacred myſteries are given;
We're met to bid a ſplendid fabric riſe,
Worthy the mighty Ruler of the ſkies.

High Prieſt.

And lo! where Uriel, angel of the ſun
Arrives to ſee the mighty buſineſs done.

Air.

Behold he comes upon the wings of light,
And with his funny veſtments clears the ſight.

URIEL.

Recitative.

The Lord ſupreme, grand-maſter of the ſkies,
Who bid creation from a chaos riſe;
The rules of architecture firſt engrav'd,
On Adam's heart.

Chorus of Prieſts and Nobles.

To heav'ns high architect, all praiſe,
All gratitude be given;
Who deign'd the human ſoul to raiſe,
By ſecrets ſprung from heav'n.

SOLOMON.

Recitative.

Adam, well vers'd in arts,
Gave to his ſons the plum and line;
By maſonry ſage Tubal Cain,
To the deep organ tun'd the ſtrain.

Air.

And while he ſwell'd the melting note,
On high the ſilver concord float.

High Prieſt.

Recitative accompanied.

Upon the ſurface of the waves,
(When God a mighty deluge pours)
Noah a choſen remnant ſaves,
And laid the ark's ſtupendious floors.

U R I E L.

Air.

Hark from on high, the maſon-word!
' David, my ſervant, ſhall not build
' A lodge for heav'n's all-ſov'reign Lord,
' Since blood and war have ſtain'd his ſhield;
' That for our deputy, his ſon
' We have reſerv'd.—Prince Solomon. Da. capo

Chorus of Prieſts and Nobles.

Sound great JEHOVAH's praiſe!
Who bid young Solomon the temple raiſe.

Recitative.

So grand a ſtructure ſhall we raiſe,
That men ſhall wonder! Angels gaze!
By art divine it ſhall be rear'd,
Nor ſhall the hammer's noiſe be heard.

Chorus.

Sound great JEHOVAH's praiſe,
Who bid king Solomon the temple raiſe.

URIEL.

Recitative.

To plan the mighty dome,
Hiram, the maſter-maſon's come.

Air by Uriel.

We know thee by thy apron white,
We know thee by thy trowel bright,
Well ſkilled in maſonry;
We know thee by thy jewel's blaze,
Thy manly walk and air;
Inſtructed thou the lodge ſhalt raiſe,
Let all for work prepare.

HIRAM.

Air.

Not like Babel's haughty building,
Shall our greater lodge be fram'd;
That to hideous jargon yielding,
Juſtly was a Babel nam'd:
There Confuſion all o'er-bearing,
Neither ſign nor word they knew;
We our work with order ſquaring,
Each proportion ſhall be true.

SOLOMON.

Recitative.

Cedars which ſince creation grew,
Fall of themſelves to grace the dome;
All Lebanon, as if ſhe knew
The great occaſion, lo is come.

URIEL.

URIEL.

Air.

Behold, my Brethren of the sky,
The Work begins worthy an Angel's eye:

Chorus of Prieſts and Nobles.

Be preſent all ye heavenly Hoſts;
The work begins, the Lord defrays the coſt.

ACT II.

MESSENGER.

Recitative.

Behold, attended by a num'rous train
Queen of the South, fair Sheba greets thy reign!
In admiration of thy wiſdom, ſhe
Comes to preſent the bended knee.

SOLOMON to HIRAM.

Receive her with a fair ſalute,
Such as with Majeſty may ſuit.

HIRAM.

Air.

When allegiance bids obey,
We with pleaſure owe its ſway.

Enter SHEBA attended.

Obedient to ſuperior greatneſs, ſee
Our Scepter hails thy mightier Majeſty.

SHEBA.

Air.

Thus Phœbe, queen of ſhade and night,
Owning the ſun's ſuperior rays;
With feebler glory, leſſer light,
Attends the triumph of his blaze:

Oh,

Oh, all excelling Prince, receive,
The tribute due to ſuch a King;
Not the gift, but will, believe;
Take the heart, not what we bring. [Da capo.

SOLOMON.

Recitative.

Let meaſures ſoftly ſweet,
Illuſtrious Sheba's preſence greet.

SOLOMON.

Air.

Tune the lute and ſtring the lyre,
Equal to the fair we ſing:
Who can ſee and not admire,
Sheba, conſort for a king:
Enliv'ning wit and beauty join,
Melting ſenſe and graceful air;
Here united powers combine,
To make her brighteſt of the fair. [Da capo.

SOLOMON.

Recitative.

Hiram, our brother and our friend,
Do thou the Queen with me attend.

SCENE II.

A View of the TEMPLE.

High Prieſt.

Recitative.

Sacred to heav'n, behold the dome appears;
Lo, what auguſt ſolemnity it wears;
Angels themſelves have deign'd to deck the frame,
And beauteous Sheba ſhall report its fame.

Air

Air.

When the Queen of the ſouth ſhall return
To the climes which acknowledge her ſway;
Where the ſun's warmer beams fiercely burn,
The Princeſs with tranſport ſhall ſay:
Well worthy my journey, I've ſeen
A Monarch both graceful and wiſe,
Deſerving the love of a Queen,
And a temple well worthy the skies. [Da capo.

Chorus.

Open ye gates, receive the Queen who ſhares,
With equal ſenſe, your happineſs and cares,

HIRAM.

Recitative.

Of riches much, but more of wiſdom ſee;
Proportion'd workmanſhip, and maſonry.

HIRAM.

Air.

Oh, charming Sheba, there behold
What maſſy ſtores of burniſh'd gold,
Yet richer is our art;
Not all the orient gems that ſhine,
Nor treaſures of rich Ophir's mine,
Excel the Maſon's heart:
True to the fair he honours, more
Than glittering gems or brighteſt ore,
The plighted pledge of love:
To ev'ry tie of honour bound,
In love and friendſhip conſtant found,
And favour'd from above.

Solomon.

SOLOMON and SHEBA.

Duet.

Sheba. { One gem beyond the reſt I ſee,
And charming Solomon is he.

Solomon. { One gem beyond the reſt I ſee,
Faireſt of fair ones, thou art ſhe.

Sheba. Oh, thou ſurpaſſing all men wiſe.

Solomon. And thine excelling womens eyes.

HIRAM.

Recitative.

Wiſdom and beauty doth combine;
Our art to raiſe, our hearts to join.

Chorus.

Give to Maſonry the prize,
Where the faireſt chuſe the wiſe;
Beauty ſtill ſhou'd wiſdom love;
Beauty and order reign above.
